LAYMEN, out of respect for the courts, assume that the Supreme Court judges of California interpreted the law accurately when, by a majority of only one, they decided that La Follette's electors, although duly named by petition, should not go on the ballot in November.

The people do not like, and therefore they have no right to be told by a judge, or anybody, that they may not vote for their own choice. For a court, by a majority of one, in disregard of established custom, to say that State electors are the servants and agents of political conventions, and that therefore the people have no right to name their own electors by petition, IS DANGEROUS.

THIS CALIFORNIA decision will be worth a great deal to those who believe that the public, having power to put judges on the bench, should also have the power to take them off.

AN ATOM is so small that angels as big as atoms could dance on the point of a needle as comfortably as a hundred human beings could dance on a ballroom floor.

The atom (its name comes from a Greek word meaning "can't be cut") was supposed to be the smallest particle of matter in nature, and so small that it couldn't possibly be divided.

Now we know that it is a little solar system in itself, having a centre or nucleus around which electrons, varying in number, revolve with a speed inconceivable to our minds, as planets revolve around our sun.

IT IS PROPOSED to smash and disintegrate one of these atoms. To do that a force must be exerted sufficient to overcome the power that holds the revolving electrons, which are nothing but units of electric force, around the central nucleus.

The task to be undertaken, in the research laboratory of Sheffield University within a few weeks, will require 600,000 horsepower. An atom of energy great enough to tear a dozen giant skyscrapers from their concrete moorings, or to move a dozen battleships at top speed, is necessary to overcome the power that holds together the widely separate parts of an atom, so small that thousands of them in the corner of your eye would not be noticed.

WE ADMIRE NATURE beyond all comprehension in "bigness" rolling suns and planets. Infinitely more marvelous beyond comprehension is the infinitely small.

If you could release, harness and use the energy that holds together the atoms that make up the crystal covering on the face of your watch, that power would run the greatest factory in the world for years.

LOTTA CRABTREE, clever actress of a day gone by, is dead, aged seventy-seven. Learn from her that real estate pays; also that even wise real estate investors often fail to recognize a bargain.

LOTTA invested her earnings in land, and died worth about $5,000,000. She made one investment in New York, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, before the Elevated railroad was finished. Having invested $8,000 in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street lots, someone persuaded her that she had been cheated. She brought suit and her money was returned. The court decided that she had been deceived as to the value of the land.

IF LOTTA had hung on to that $8,000 investment, she would have died worth $10,000,000, instead of $5,000,000.

Moral: When you get hold of a piece of real estate KEEP IT. There is only just so much of this earth. Get some of it in the right place.

SHIBE PARK JAMMED FOR YANKS' GAME

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—Shibe Park was jammed to its limits this afternoon despite cloudy weather, to see the Yankees and Athletics battle in the second game of the series that is expected to settle the American League pennant race between Washington and New York.

U. S. HORSE WINS BY HEAD

Great French Champion Beaten in Hair-Raising Finish; Wise Counsellor Third

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Ladkin, one of five great American horses pitted against the French champion, Epinard, won the one-mile international Special No. 2 here this afternoon, while 25,000 looked on. Epinard was second and Wise Counsellor third.

Ladkin, an 8 to 5 favorite, won by a head.

Epinard got away in front, with Zev, one of Harry F. Sinclair's entries, second. Ladkin was third and never ceased to challenge until he took the lead.

At the halfmile mark Wise Counsellor, which finished third, took the lead, but had not the stamina to hold the advantage.

Breaking into the stretch, Ladkin showed his class and gameness and swept in front to remain there until the welcoming roar of the 25,000 watching from the grandstands proclaimed him a winner, as he already had been by the judges.

Ladkin's time was 2-5 of a second behind the track record held by John P. Grier's.

DEATH OF TWO BY AUTO ENDS ROMANCE

The romance of Miss Mildred Robinson, of No. 824 Warren street, Roxbury, and Philip G. Lewis, of No. 183 Chestnut street, Cambridge, will never culminate in marriage.

It was brought to a tragic end when the young woman rode to her death in an automobile accident on the Newington road, just outside Portsmouth, N. H.

Two other women and two men were seriously injured when the machine in which they were riding failed to make a turn and hurtled

GIRL PRISONER, BOARDER SHOT IN FLIGHT

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 27.—Enticed to the attic room of a half demented boarder in her mother's home, fourteen-year-old Stasia Prenata was beaten and shot through the right cheek today when she bravely resisted his attack.

Her screams aroused her mother, who was on the front porch with another woman.

Mrs. Prenata summoned the police and a few minutes later a police detail had broken down the attic door and carried the half frantic schoolgirl to the street floor.

The boarder was not in sight, but a strand of rope swaying from the window of his room told the story of his escape and the hunt for him spread to surrounding streets.

His trail was picked up shortly near High street, and he was ordered to halt. Failing to do so, he was shot twice by one of the patrolmen, and is dying at Memorial Hospital.

The man is about thirty-five years old, and was known to the Prenatas as Peter Wit. He had lived in the house about three months.

GUNMAN SLAYER OF POLICEMAN IS DEAD

A moment before he gasped his last breath, the gunman slayer of Patrolman Motroni, East Boston officer, at the City Hospital today, revealed his real identity.

"I'm William Martin. That's my real name," he whispered with difficulty to a doctor and an officer at his bedside.

"My mother is Jennie Martin. She lives on West Seventh street, South Boston."

The slayer dropped his head wearily on his pillow. A moment later and the case of the man held for the murder of the police officer was beyond the jurisdiction of any earthly tribunal.

Martin, who until the time he confessed his real name, was known to the police as George Wright, died as the result of four bullet wounds inflicted by Patrolman Thomas Duggan after Martin had fatally wounded Patrolman Motroni in the basement of No. 56 Liverpool street, East Boston.

Two of the bullets entered the abdomen of the slayer and each arm was pierced by a bullet. From the time Martin entered the hospital little hope was held out for his recovery. His condition was aggravated when he made an unsuccessful

B. C. PILLS UP BIG LEAD ON R. I. BOYS

Braves Field, Sept. 29.—Boston College pried the lid off eastern football today when Capt. Joe Kozlowski led his team on the field against the Black and White Providence College gridsters.

Providence kicked off to B. C. and after a few line plunges Ward took the ball through tackle for the first touchdown of the game. McManus kicked the goal. Score B. C. 7, Providence 0.

An exchange of kicks brought the ball to midfield in B. C.'s possession, where a 35 yard forward McKenny to O'Connell put B. C. in scoring position and Ward again scored for ful attempt to escape from his cot in the City Hospital.

GUNMAN SLAYER OF POLICEMAN REVEALS IDENTITY AS HE DIES

Police were unable to establish the slayer's identity. He was too ill to be adequately photographed while his Bertillon measurements were not taken. The man was known in the underworld of Boston as "Wright" and he had successfully withheld his real identity from the men with whom he associated.

Following Martin's attempt at escape, the police guard about his bed was increased.

BEDSIDE GUARDED.

Patrolmen Poole, Goodman and McDonough were on guard at the bedside just before daybreak today. There had been nothing to indicate that he gunman's condition had undergone any decided change.

The wounded man feebly motioned to Patrolman Poole to bend over his bed.

"Come here, Jack, I want to tell you something before I pass out," he whispered to the officer.

"Do you think you are going to die?" the officer asked quickly.

"Yes, I'm slipping now and I'll go pretty soon," whispered the gunman, and even then the first rattle could be heard in his throat as death's icy hand touched him.

The officer signified that he would be willing to listen to any statement.

"I've lied about my name," whispered the man. He could barely make himself heard.

"My parents were French and I am a Protestant. I was born at No. 37 Hanover street, North End. My name is William Martin and my mother lives on Seventh street, South Boston."

The man's voice was growing weaker.

ASKED FOR MOTHER.

"My mother's name is Jennie. Tell her. You'll find out plenty about me after I'm gone. I was in prison once."

The head dropped back on the pillow—the voice was stilled forever.

The patrolman immediately notified the station house and officers were sent to the street named by the dying man. Two families named Martin were found on the street, but both disclaimed any knowledge of the dead man.

After Martin's death inspectors went to the hospital and obtained his finger-prints and in this manner his record will be found.

DAVIS GAINS ON LA FOLLETTE IN STRAW VOTE

Of nine groups of citizens interrogated in Greater Boston by Boston American reporters, on the fourth day of this newspaper's presidential preference ballot, all but two were "carried" by President Coolidge.

The President, however, on this occasion failed to tally a majority of all the votes cast:

Coolidge, 255; Davis and La Follette combined, 278.

Mr. Davis led United States Senator La Follette, 134 votes to 124.

Total vote for 4 days	2,581
Coolidge, Republican	1,367
La Follette, Progressive	647
Davis, Democrat	567
Coolidge over La Follette	720
Coolidge's majority	153

Shift from Cox ('20) to Coolidge	126
From Harding ('20) to Davis	113
From Cox, Dem., to La Follette	309
From Harding, to La Follette	278
First voters, etc., for Coolidge	70
For La Follette	60
For Davis	40

The Presidential Preference Poll is being taken by the Boston American in conjunction with other Hearst newspapers throughout the country. From now until well along towards Election Day, you will be informed here, not only of the way the political wind is blowing in this part of the country but concerning the Presidential outlook in the nation.

The first report presented today is that of a poll taken at Brighton and Commonwealth avenues between 9 and 11 o'clock in the forenoon. The reporter received the ballots of sixty-three pedestrians, who voted as follows:

Coolidge, forty-three; La Follette, sixteen; Davis, six.

This vote represented a loss to the Democrats of twenty-one votes, as compared to the Cox vote of four years ago, eleven Democrats declaring their intention to vote this year for President Coolidge and ten others marking their straw ballots for La Follette.

In Roslindale square, between the hours of 6 and 8 p. m., the same reporter interrogated sixty-one voters with this result:

Coolidge, thirty-nine; La Follette, twelve; Davis, ten.

Of the twelve La Follette votes, according to the ballots as marked, seven were pulled from the Democratic and five from the Republican candidate.

AT NORTH STATION.

Among seventy-five persons who voted at the North Station a large number were women. The ladies divided almost evenly between Coolidge and Davis.

There was one student among the seven males who declared for La Follette and the rest of the Wisconsin man's supporters appeared to be laboring men. The North Station totals were:

Coolidge, 42; Davis, 28; La Follette, 8.

Grouped as "Copley Square," the next bundle of seventy-four votes represents patient inquiry in shops along Boylston street, Stuart street and Huntington avenue, a brief visit to the lobby of the Copley Plaza Hotel, chats with pedestrians and taxi-drivers, a poll of observant citizens keeping tabs on the repair of a broken water-main and, finally, a trip to the Public Library, where the youthful investigator had obtained the views of three library attendants before an official politely asked him to quit. Result of the tour:

Coolidge, 61; Davis, 25, La Follette, 8.

IN THE WEST END.

La Follette got three of these votes from Democrats, three from Republicans, and two from first voters. Seven who cast their ballots for Harding four years ago will vote this year for Davis, they said, while nine who voted for Governor Cox of Ohio in 1920 lean this year towards Calvin Coolidge.

"Old Reliable," who accounts today for 89 of the day's total of 533 votes, began his canvass with a visit to the Fish Pier. Most of the voters he interrogated there he describes as "Cape Codders," who will vote the straight Republican ticket.

From the Pier the veteran headed for the West End, where he visited two not-very-well-known hotels and five industrial establishments. This tour brought out the day's biggest support for La Follette and—which may or may not be of tremendous interest to the Democratic leaders of Boston—revealed John W. Davis an extremely bad third.

La Follette, 45; Coolidge, 30; Davis, 14.

The handful of votes listed today under the "South Boston" heading represent a brief stand in the neighborhood of the S. A. Woods Machine Company plant, Damrell street. For the second time in four days, President Coolidge emerges from a straw ballot in South Boston with a goose-egg:

Davis, 20; La Follette, 7; Coolidge, 0.

Six of the above La Follette votes come from Democrats.

In Watertown Square, between the hours of 11 A. M. and 1 P. M., another reporter passed blank ballots to 43 voters who were waiting for trolley cars.

COOLIDGE MEN SILENT.

"One thing that strikes me as worthy of mention," this Watertown reporter says, "is that the Coolidge supporters have as little to say, as a rule, as their distinguished leader. The folks who are for La Follette this year, on the other hand, are ready to tell the world about it. Democrats stress loyalty to party rather than their attachment to an individual." The count in Watertown Square:

Coolidge, 19; La Follette, 13; Davis, 11.

Of the above La Follette voters, 8 said they voted four years ago for Warren G. Harding. Five are former Democrats.

The 29 votes accounted for in the "Somerville-Charlestown" chapter were taken more or less haphazard by a newsgatherer patrolling his regular beat on other duties. His voters were pedestrians, some on Main street and others in City Square, Charlestown, and the remainder in the neighborhood of Union Square, Somerville. His figures:

Davis, 12; Coolidge, 11; La Follette, 6.

LA FOLLETTE STRONG.

The final contribution of the fourth day, listed under the heading "West End," is the result of a stroll through Norman, Lancaster, Staniford, Cambridge and Temple streets. While it does not jibe in every respect with the report submitted "At Large," it indicates that La Follette has great strength in that part of town.

Coolidge, 12; Davis, 11; La Follette, 9.

Most of the Coolidge vote was picked up on Temple street, apparently from persons on their way from the State House to the North Station.

FOURTH DAY TOTALS.

Here are the totals for the fourth day of the canvass in and around Boston:

Total number of votes cast	533
Coolidge, Republican	255
Davis, Democrat	134
La Follette, Progressive	124

Shift from Cox (1920) to Coolidge	85
From Harding (1920) to Davis	15
From Cox, Dem., to La Follette	72
From Harding, Rep., to La Follette	44
First voters, etc., for Coolidge	18
For La Follette	8
For Davis	11

"First voters," in the above summary, is merely a convenient descriptive for persons who did not vote in the last national election, who voted for the candidates of the minor parties, or who vote this year for the first time.

The canvass will be continued until further notice. If you are asked to mark a ballot, please do so. You are not required to give your name. In no way whatever can the identity of the voter be revealed.

$100,000 DAMAGE BY FIRE IN WATKINS, N. Y.

Watkins, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Fifteen places of business, constituting most of the business section of this village, were destroyed by fire which started in a blacksmith shop today.

BETTER TRADE IF LA FOLLETTE IS WINNER

La Follette, as President, will better the circumstances and conditions of Western farmers and the farmers then will be able to buy New England goods, South Boston residents were told at rallies addressed by Clifton M. Neal, secretary to Senator Lynn P. Frazier of North Dakota. Secretary Neal is preceding his chief on a speaking tour throughout New England.

The straw vote being conducted by the Boston American and by other Hearst newspapers was pointed to by the speaker as indicative of the fact that this year's White House battle has shaken down to a fight between La Follette and President Coolidge, with the the odds in favor of the former.

The West, he said, is eager to rebuke the President for his neglect of the farmers.

La Follette Leading 4 to 1 in Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 27 (I.N.S.).—Senator La Follette will score a sweeping victory in Wisconsin—at least three to one, and possibly four to one over President Coolidge, second choice. The Independent candidate is also showing great strength in four other States—Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota.

These are the conclusions reported from tabulations thus far made in the poll being conducted by Wisconsin News, as a part of the nation-wide canvass being made by Hearst newspapers.

La Follette's biggest show of strength is in Wisconsin, where he has obtained a total of 7,275 votes as against 1,661 for Coolidge and 407 for Davis.

An analysis of the vote shows that La Follette in this part of the country is drawing the major part of his strength from the Harding landslide of 1920. Each of the five States mentioned cast its electoral vote for Harding. Of the Wisconsin Senator's total in his own State, 2,911 votes are from Harding supporters of 1920. Coolidge got only 712 of these voters and Davis 32.

The new voters also seem to be flocking to the Independent standard. Here is the way they have been casting their ballots in the straw vote: For La Follette, 1,052; for Coolidge, 284; for Davis, 74.

A significant situation is found in the fact that La Follette is beating Davis even among those who voted for Cox in 1920.

On the basis of these returns it is predicted that La Follette will get 500,000 of the 800,000 votes which the Badger State is expected to cast in November.

The Wisconsin News survey shows that La Follette is at the present time the leading candidate in Minnesota, Nebraska and North and South Dakota.

Coolidge Leading in Michigan-Ohio Vote

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 27 (Universal).—President Coolidge was leading by a wide margin the Hearst nation-wide poll in Michigan and Ohio, when it was announced that "Fighting Bob" La Follette was to visit Michigan.

Ohio has been considered a doubtful State perennially. It is considered such this year. But on the face of the poll that has been made by the Detroit Times and two other very responsible newspaper mediums in Ohio, the President has the first mortgage on Ohio.

The vote there stands:

Coolidge—7,202. Davis—3,228. La Follette—2,431.

In Michigan it is different. This Republican State, which on two occasions has gone to Bull Moosers, gives the President a better percentage over Davis and shows La Follette relatively much stronger than the Democratic nominee.

The Times Michigan poll is:

Coolidge, 3,357; Davis, 568; La Follette, 2,023.

A carefully-conducted Cincinnati newspaper poll shows La Follette gaining steadily over Davis in that section of Ohio.

CLAIMS SHE IS HEIR OF LOTTA CRABTREE

Boston Woman Says She Intends to Ask Court to Allow Her to Prove Relationship

A woman claiming to be Maud Louise Crabtree and a relative of Lotta Crabtree, the famous actress who died the other day, has announced that she is an heir to the estate of the former public favorite.

Although it was generally believed that Lotta Crabtreet, who left an estate believed to amount to about $5,000,000, had no living kith or kin, the claimant declares there are other relatives if they care to come forward.

Maud Louise Crabtree, who lives in Boston, bases her claim on the contention that her grandfather and Lotta's were brothers.

"I was born in Belfast, Me., in 1874," she said. "Our relationship is on my father's side. My grandfather and Lotta's were brothers.

"There were three brothers who came from Scotland and settled in America. They were George, John and Amos Crabtree. Lotta's grandfather was George and mine John.

"In reality there are many relatives if they come forward. In any event I will ask the Probate Court to give me the chance to prove this statement. I shall tell the whole story to the judge."

The will of Lotta Crabtree, according to Attorney William A. Morse, will be filed next week in the Suffolk Probate Court. No intimation of its terms has been made public.

GOV. SMITH PROMISES "FIGHT OF HIS LIFE"

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 27 (I.N.S.).—Promising the leaders of his party to make the greatest fight of his life, Governor Alfred E. Smith, renominated unanimously at the closing session of the Democratic State convention, returned to Albany today.

While the leaders regard the Governor's speech as the first gun of the coming State campaign, it was understood today that in his formal speech the Governor would deal at length with the Republican platform as "one of the most dishonest political documents in history."

LA FOLLETTE FORCES REFUSED REHEARING

San Francisco, Sept. 27.—The Supreme Court of California denied the petition of La Follette-Wheeler supporters for a rehearing of the question of placing the Independent ticket of presidential electors supporting the Wisconsin candidate on the November ballot.

Aboard Davis Special, En Route to Washington, Sept. 27.—Having closed a two-day speaking tour of his native State of West Virginia with a promise that he would not "tip-toe in foreign relations," if elected President, John W. Davis, Democratic standard bearer, was en route to Washington early today for conferences with party leaders before going back to New York and prospective campaigning in the Northeastern States.

6-YEAR DELAY OVER FATAL CROSSING

Quincy Adams Grade Crossing Elimination Decreed by Court in 1918

If the New Haven Railroad had obeyed a Supreme Court decree entered in 1918, yesterday's double tragedy at the Quincy Adams crossing of that railroad probably would not have occurred.

Nearly six years ago the road was ordered to eliminate the dangerous grade crossings at the Quincy Adams stations.

William Tillistrand, heroic gate tender at the latter station, was killed making a futile effort to save Mrs. Julia Kennard, seventy years old, of No. 41 Clifford street, Roxbury.

Today it was disclosed that the New Haven made no real progress toward the abolition of the death trap. Property has been purchased on Federal avenue, near the station, and ultimately, it is to be assumed, the New Haven will remove buildings and extend Federal avenue from the point where it is crossed by Presidents avenue, as part of the work of grade crossing elimination.

The decree was entered in court after a special commission had investigated the danger at the Quincy Adams station.

Former Governor John L. Bates, Arthur R. Wellman and Joseph P. Lyons were on the commission.

The plans of the commission call for the depression of Water street, so that it will be an underpass. Presidents avenue will be closed, at the point at which it crosses Federal avenue.

The decree provides that the railroad bear 65 per cent. of the cost, estimated at $400,000.

"MUDDY" RUEL SITS AT BENCH WITH JUDGE

Even if Alec Ferguson did step on the Washington Senators, noncombatant Bostonians are trying to make Stanley Harris's boys realize that they are with them in their effort to stay in front of Miller Huggins and his non-stop pennant winners.

"Muddy" Ruel, catcher, was signalled out for honor today by Judge Edward Counihan, who invited him up on the bench in East Cambridge court.

Gorham Brigham of Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. Taggart, his daughter and his son were present during the operation. Under a local anaesthetic, the large appendix was opened and the doctors' diagnosis of his condition as one of appendicitis was found to be correct.

The doctors reported that Mr. Taggart underwent the operation remarkable well and that he is resting quite comfortably.

WATCH STRIKE MAY END BY EVENING

As a result of a conference between company officials and strikers, it was reported today that the strike at the Waltham Watch Company factory was on the verge of settlement.

It was said to be almost certain that the strike would officially be called off before night, a compromise agreement having been reached.

It is understood that under the terms of this agreement women earning $20 a week or less and men earning $40 a week or less, will return to work without change in pay. All making more wages will accept a cut and the question will then be submitted to arbitration.

At a conference scheduled for today it was believed that the amount of the reduction would be settled, the strike committee having suggested 9.4 per cent., the amount of the original cut which caused the strike eight weeks ago.

At a conference which lasted seven and a half hours, the company was represented by President Frederick C. Dumaine and I. E. Baucher. The nineteen members of the strike committee were headed by President Ernest Faulkner, Vice-President Irving Hart and Secretary Howard Mayhew.

RAID HALTS ROMANCE OF VERMONT HUSBAND AND FATHER

ARRESTED WITH GIRL IN FLAT

Cambridge Officers Take Him for the Larceny of Auto From Physician

Jewitt Laird, who dreamed of romance with a pretty girl who conspicuously was not his wife and the mother of three children, is today on his way back to St. Johnsbury, Vt., as a fugitive from justice.

He was arrested in an apartment at No. 898 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, by Officers O'Brien and Mooney of the Central Square station.

The girl was with him. She described herself as Ethel Parker of Windsor, Vt.

Laird, who lives at No. 60 East End avenue, St. Johnsbury, is specifically charged with the theft of an automobile owned by Dr. Allen, a leading physician of that town.

Cambridge police recovered the machine, and took from the girl $200 in money, and a diamond ring, which she admitted Laird had given her.

Although she was not arrested Miss Parker went back to Vermont with Laird, who, Vermont authorities say, ran away from his wife and children a few days ago.

The girl told the police she did not know he was married and that he had promised to marry her, even giving her a wedding ring as an earnest of his good intentions.

ALL POLICE ASKED TO HALT AUTO SPEEDERS

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, has sent letters to the chiefs of police of all towns and cities in the State, asking co-operation in reducing automobile accidents through October.

Mr. Goodwin stated that October is always the worst month of the year because the days get shorter suddenly.

He asked that special efforts be made between the hours of four and six to slow down all motor vehicles, for that is the time when most of the children are killed or injured. He also expressed the hope that the operator of every motor vehicle found on the streets at night without proper headlights or rear lights be prosecuted.

VACCA ASKS COURT TO OUST HIS MANAGER

John Vacca, a well known Boston pugilist, today brought suit in Superior Court against John M. Leith of Newton to rescind a contract signed by the boxer and his father, Joseph Vacca, on December 1, 1922, making Leith his manager. It also gave Leith control over the boxing affairs of young Vacca for five years.

The action was brought on the ground that the boxer was a minor at the time the contract was signed, and still is.

Vacca wants the court temporarily to enjoin Leith from acting as his manager.

YOUNG CRANK WROTE 'BURKE LETTERS'

A youthful crank with a fancied grievance took advantage of the disappearance from St. Agnes School for Girls, Newton, of Mary Burke, 12-year-old daughter of Detective Patrick Burke of Newbury street, to write two anonymous letters to the latter, the first of which was believed to have been written by Mary herself to her father before she was found tired and hungry in Cambridge early this week.

Mary Burke.

Receipt of the second letter after Mary's return to her home convinced her father that the girl did not write the first letter in which a mysterious threat to Burke was written in a faint pencil scrawl. The first letter was signed "The Slippers Three," and mention of "The Slippers" was made in the second. Both were written by the same hand, Burke believes.

GIRL KILLED

over an embankment at Whidden's Corner.

The other victims, who gave their names reluctantly, said they were Theresa McSwain of Roxbury, Mary Marine of Lynn, Mrs. Lesley C. Couch of Boston and B. J. Sampson of Newburyport.

All four were taken to the Portsmouth hospital, where, because of their condition, they were not closely questioned. An inquest will probably be held to force them to reveal the details of the accident.

Although one romance was shattered by the accident, it may be responsible for a reconciliation between a hitherto estranged couple.

It was learned that the husband of Theresa McSwain, from whom she has been separated for seven years, was hastening to her bedside today. Friends of the couple are hopeful that Mrs. McSwain's injuries may result in healing the breach between them.

She is thirty-two years old, and the mother of four boys.

According to physicians at the hospital, Miss Marine was the most seriously injured of the four survivors. It is believed she sustained a fractured pelvis.

Instead of having been returning from the Rochester Fair, as at first reported, it was learned the party was on the way to Alton Bay, Lake Winnepesaukee, for the weekend. Miss Marine and Sampson were picked up on the way to Portsmouth. Sampson sustained the slightest injuries of the group, while Couch was badly bruised and cut.

The police determined that the accident was caused by the heavy fog, and that there was no criminal responsibility on the driver.

The car tore across the road, over an embankment and rolled to the bottom. Miss Robinson was crushed under the overturned machine, and although breathing when taken out, died before reaching the hospital.

She was widely known in her section of Roxbury, having been an election officer, and was engaged to marry Lewis. Miss Robinson was employed in the Library Bureau at Cambridge, and resided with her mother, Mrs. Bessie Robinson. A brother John and two sisters, Ruth and Priscilla, survive. She was 25 years old.

The third woman, known as Miss Marine, suffered possible internal injuries, while both men were severely cut and bruised about the body and legs.

Miss Peggy Crowley of No. 308 Washington street, Lynn, sister of Mrs. Pearl Couch, was fortunate in not being among those injured in the accident. Miss Crowley had been invited to make the automobile trip with her sister, but stopped off at Salem. While the auto party was looking for her she was looking for them, Miss Crowley then returned to Lynn and the first she knew that an accident to the party had occurred was when she read the account in the newspapers.

FLEEING BANK GUARD ELUDES SLEUTHS

Police Believe Hanifin, the Springfield $100,000 Thief, Has Left N. Y. for South

Springfield, Sept. 27.—In the belief William J. Hanifin, missing guard of the Union Trust Company, who disappeared Thursday with $100,000 of the company's funds, has escaped the police search in New York, the local authorities today were extending the search farther South.

Chief of Police W. J. Quilty has returned from Hartford, where he went with members of the local police detective bureau Thursday night on receipt of word that Hanifin had been seen to leave a train in that city.

Winthrop I. Davis, local representative of the Massachusetts Bonding Company, today offered a reward of $2,500 for information that would lead to the apprehension of Hanifin. This was done on the advice of Chief Quilty.

Officials of the bank today expressed no confidence in the theory that Hanifin had an accomplice. Investigations in Hartford proved that Hanifin, after buying a suit case in that city, left for New York within less than an hour.

This was established by Julius E. Jepson, who identified a picture of Hanifin as the man he drove in his taxicab to Fordham, N. Y., where he left him at the elevated station. Hanifin was traced in part by the $20 bills he spent.

ZR-3 TO START FOR U. S. WEEK AFTER NEXT

Friedrichshafen, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—The ZR-3 will start on its transatlantic trip to Lakehurst, N. J., on October 5 or October 6, provided the weather over the Atlantic Ocean is favorable at that time, Dr. Hugo Eckener, director of the Zeppelin Company, announced today.

Lieutenant-Commander Garland Fulton, American naval officer who has been observing the construction of the giant dirigible by the Zeppelin Company for the United States Navy, has advised Washington that the airship will start for America within seven or eight days.

The American Navy Department, it is stated, is sending three vessels to take up stations at different points on the Atlantic for the purpose of keeping Dr. Eckener advised of weather conditions.

VICTIMS FAIL TO IDENTIFY GEM SUSPECTS

New York, Sept. 27. (Universal).—Hope of baffled detectives seeking to trace the desperate butterfly guerrilla gang—the crafty organization with spies in every cabaret; blamed for the murder of Dot King, Louise Lawson and two more bold and brutal gem robberies—was dispelled when two suspects, on whom they depended, could not be identified by witnesses.

One was John Feinstein, twenty-four, who was held without bail on a charge of robbery. He had been previously identified by a maid as one of the gang who robbed Miss Edith Bobe, modiste, two weeks ago, but Avonne Taylor, Follies actress and another "butterfly" victim of the gem thugs, was unable to pick Feinstein out of a crowd.

Police, however, still hope that other victims may be able to identify him. They argue that Miss Taylor, like many others, might have been afraid of the vengeance of the gang if she identified Feinstein.

While Feinstein was in court alert detectives, who have been expecting allies would show themselves, picked out a beautiful young woman who was making signs to him from the rear of the court room.

Feinstein denied he had ever seen her before. She was taken in custody and questioned for four hours, but the police were finally forced to release her when she denied all knowledge of series of crimes laid of his boy.

Del Monte, Cal., Sept. 27.—The Hotel Del Monte, centre of a playground known internationally to tourists and sportsmen for its beauty and golf links, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin, which started in a tower in the front of the building today.

SUES DAUGHTER TO GET BODY OF HUSBAND

Brookline Widow Wants Either Deed to the Lot or a New Burial Place

The widow and the daughter of the late John T. Wilson of Brookline have gone to law over the disposition of his body.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Wilson, the widow, today brought a bill in equity to compel her stepdaughter, Mary M. Hale of Boston, to either deed to her the lot where Mr. Wilson is buried, on Magnolia path, Evergreen Cemetery, or to allow her to remove the body to another lot.

It is the contention of the widow that her stepdaughter dislikes her and means to prevent her from being buried with her husband.

When he died, according to her claim, the daughter offered to pay for the burial, saying "she was better able to do it," but used the advantage thus gained to exercise the right of absolute domain over the plot on Magnolia path.

"ARMY DAY" EXERCISES IN FENWAY ON OCT. 2

An "Army Day" demonstration in the Fenway on October 2 will open the national three-day convention of the Military Order of the World War at the Copley-Plaza, Lieutenant-Colonel Melvin Leonard told members at a meeting of the Boston Chapter. The expense will be met through the sale of programs, he said.

Major-General Mark L. Hersey was the guest of honor at the meeting, and Brigadier-General John H. Sherburne the chief speaker. General Sherburne paid tribute to the negro artillery, saying that while they were slower than the white artillery, they were more accurate and stood up well. One battery which he commanded worked in gas for 18 hours without a stop.

"I have never been able to get one of them a single decoration," he said.

MUST BEHAVE FOR TWO YEARS OR GET ONE IN JAIL

For two years the prospect of a one-year sentence in the House of Correction will hang over the head of Philip McCarthy, alias Clayton, principally because he didn't behave at the Mechanics Building boxing bouts.

McCarthy was arrested by Police Inspectors Alexander and Lyons, who looked in the black books and discovered a lengthy record and a western address entered for him in the ledger. The record included picking pockets.

He was charged today in Municipal Court with being a vagrant and the year's suspended sentence with two years' probation, imposed.

BOND FORGERY ARREST ON BROOKLYN MAN'S TIP

New York, Sept. 27—Samuel Seilken, a Brooklyn glove manufacturer, is responsible for the arrest of three men in connection with the wholesale disposal of spurious bonds of the Steel & Tube Company of America, it was disclosed today. Seilken sold his glove factory, receiving in payment the spurious bonds. He then obtained a loan on the bonds from the Pacific bank, whose officials later learned the paper was spurious, whereupon the glove manufacturer reported the affair to the authorities.

Thomas G. Thompson of Hempstead, Frank A. Miller, Montclair, N. J., and Edward Feist, Atlantic Highlands, N. J., to whom Sicklen sold, were arrested in connection with the circulation of the bonds.

PRISONER FLEES WHILE COURT WATCHES ZR-3

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Paul Streck, under indictment for perjury and burglary, has the visit of the ZR-3 to Potsdam yesterday to thank for his liberty. When the airship hove into sight as his trial was being conducted, officials, witnesses and spectators dashed out, leaving Streck alone in the dock.

When the airship passed out of sight, trial was resumed and it was found that Streck also was out of sight. The court gave him eighteen months and sent out a warrant for his rearrest.

COLEMAN & SONS GET CONTRACT FOR GRADING

Mayor Curley today signed a contract with J. C. Coleman & Sons Co. for the building of bleachers and grading at William Eustis playground, Roxbury. The firm bid $41,545, being the lowest in the list.

THINKS FALSE ARREST IS WORTH $10,000

MRS. LOUISE JENSEN
While she was waiting for a train in Framingham, State Constable Beaupre detained her as a forger suspect. She was taken to the police station and later released as the "wrong woman." Now she says Beaupre was "all wrong" and is suing him.

WOMAN SUES POLICEMAN FOR $10,000

Lieutenant Charles T. Beaupre of the State constabulary is the defendant in a $10,000 suit for damages for false arrest and assault and battery, brought in behalf of Mrs. Louise Jensen, formerly of Holliston.

The alleged arrest took place May 29, but Mrs. Jensen, who was decorated by the King and Queen of Denmark for services as a war nurse, is said to be still suffering from shock.

The suit was brought in Middlesex Superior Court by the woman's counsel, John E. Swift, Democratic nominee for Attorney General.

According to Attorney Swift the woman was held from 11 a. m. until 2 a. m., next day in the Framingham police station for the Waltham authorities, on suspicion of being a forger.

The Framingham police denied any knowledge of the incident, when asked today, and referred questioners to the State House.

Captain George A. Parker of the State constabulary is quoted as saying that Mrs. Jensen was picked up for the Waltham police and later released when it was found she was the wrong woman. He said he was unaware of any brutality on the part of Lieutenant Beaupre in holding the woman, and that she signed the customary release from civil action.

STRANGE WOMAN IN CASE.

According to Mrs. Jensen's friends, she was waiting for a train at the Framingham station at 11 p. m. May 29, being en route from her home in Holliston to visit her sons in New York.

A strange woman engaged her in casual conversation and then left the station. In a few minutes she returned with Lieutenant Beaupre, and both sat down near Mrs. Jensen.

The strange woman again hurried out and Lieutenant Beaupre is said to have seized Mrs. Jensen by the arm and informed her she was under arrest.

She protested, but was taken to the Framingham police station, where she learned she was believed to be a woman wanted in Waltham for forging a check.

Mrs. Jensen produced identification papers, without result. Eventually she was permitted to telephone to Chief of Police Louis B. Holbrook of Holliston. He is said to have told Lieutenant Beaupre to release the woman, but the State officer refused.

At 2 o'clock an officer arrived from Waltham and declared Mrs. Jensen was not the woman sought. The woman was then released and taken to a hotel, from which she proceeded to New York, where she was said to have been under a doctor's care for some weeks.

MILLIONS LOST IN GERMAN BOND SPECULATION

New York, Sept. 27 (I.N.S.)—American speculators in German war bonds will lose millions of dollars, it was estimated today, by the collapse of these bonds in the foreign financial markets this week.

In the confusion and lack of information which followed the revelation of German industrial bonds on the basis of 15 per cent. of par value at the time of issuance, thousands of speculators have been purchasing the 5 per cent. German war bonds.

Good profits were made by those who bought at around $300 for each 1,000,000-mark unit, and sold them on the rapid advance to $1,000 and $1,400 per unit.

IMOGENE HAS BECOME 'MISS ROBERTSON'

Tinney's Friend Haughtily Denies Her Identity Upon Her Arrival in Europe

Plymouth, England, Sept. 27 (I.N.S.).—It may have been Imogene Wilson, former Follies girl and reconciled friend of the sometimes eccentric comedian, Frank Tinney, who sailed from New York on the liner Columbus, but it was haughty "Mary Imogene Robertson" who left the same stateroom today when the liner reached Plymouth Harbor.

"I am not Miss Wilson. I am Miss Robertson. I don't know Miss Wilson. Please don't bother me," she said in her haughtiest manner.

Then Bobby Gray, Tinney's negro valet, who also arrived aboard the Columbus, rushed up and escorted Miss Imogene to the liner's saloon, where a British immigration officer looked over her passport papers.

MESSAGE FROM TINNEY.

Gray likewise has seen no Miss Wilson during the voyage, he said.

A message from Tinney, whose music hall engagement has just been extended eight weeks, arrived as the passport inspection was concluded.

It was delivered by a representative of Tinney's London manager, sent at Tinney's direction to look out for Miss Imogene and guard her against photographers and reporters.

In bed with indigestion last night Tinney announced he would be unable to meet the girl who claimed his lovemaking was aggravated assault when both were in New York. He said he would be glad to see her again, but would not go out of the way to bring about the meeting.

DENIES SEASICKNESS.

Miss Imogene was dressed in black, unrelieved except for a touch of red in the trimmings of her gown. Her blonde hair peeked from beneath a black cloche hat.

Her fellow passengers said Miss Imogene was sick the first five days out, but the girl herself, still denying she was Miss Wilson, added a denial that she had been seasick.

On board the train to London, Miss Imogene hid herself in her compartment and refused to discuss even the fact that Mary Robertson was her name before she became a Follies beauty and took the name of "Imogene Wilson."

SEQUEL OF CHICKIE

By Elenore Meherin

Follow Here the Joys and Sorrows of This Boston Girl You All Meet Every Day

IN the next few hours not any brother could have battled with a greater love; none with more flaming skill.

He said to Chickie when the blood transfusion was over and Jake seemed easier; even stronger: "In higher hands than ours, now—"

"Nothing more can be done."

Yet Jake rallied and his eyes lost their startled look. For the interval of an hour or so he seemed stronger. Now and then a chill passed through him. . . . Yet there was a serenity about him lying there—the dignity of the king that he was falling like a garment about him—

It pierced her. She had never seen his face so white; never the hair going in such massy waves from the lofty forehead and the red mouth that had been so flashing in its joy now pale and straightened.

Yet a supremacy about him. He was not the one to yield. Why, Death was a good fellow, perhaps—chummy as Life.

And if one must walk with Death why, then, one doffs his hat and swings along—

So he walked awhile, with long pauses in between, fighting to keep the smile on his face—fighting to keep all fears behind. Something unnerving in this majesty of his will. He looked to David once and said: "Thanks, old fellow—finished?"

"Look here, Jake—you have a chance—"

"I know. Stay, Helena—stay with me. I'll not be long—"

Not Easy to Smile

Not easy to smile into his anxious eyes; not easy to say. "Why, Jake—you're supposed to get better—oh, really. You're stronger."

"My time—here now. Are those tears, Helena? Why? I had the best of life—no kick—"

The late afternoon sun made yellow patches on the wall—the sky was luminous and blue. Jake's eyes wandered to the light and to the window—ah—leaving that, too—and all that one can so enjoy—

But he said: "The best of life—yes—"

Suddenly the smile was half mocking on his mouth, relieved its anxious pain. "All but the best—Helena—give it to me—you can. Put your arms about me—the last time."

A soft cry broke from her. She did then what Jake had often asked and long awaited. She put her arms gently about him, pressed her lips willingly on his, and on his eyes.

There came again that lilt and the smile of a deep, triumphant tenderness — "Sweeter—whiter — my Helena—"

Even as he spoke, bewilderment like the flash of a knife went into his eyes. Jake's hand tightened convulsively and loosened on hers.

Some one had arms about her; some one whispered, "Our friend is gone."

The Farewell

So Jake looked back without regret and forward without fear. He turned from all the vital, glowing things to face the empty quiet—no murmuring about it.

Farewell to Life and smiled. Not glad to go, dear Life. But since one must, why then, a smile for Death. Who knows—Death, too, may prove a friend? Who knows what new adventure she may show?

That rich and questing look was on his face and a majesty come now to dwell upon its regal line and color. In death, as in life, it was the face of a king.

Midnight—the hundred friends were gone. Chickie came to pay her tribute—oh, to give a service to the well loved friend; see that things might be as he would wish them.

Jake's lips were red and smiling—the kind, ironic smile, as though he were just speaking; or as though he were about to say: "Well, gone alone, you see—after all alone.

What—crying? Not for your old friend Jake, my darling. Why, look at the man! He's well enough, God wot, and always will be!"

She touched Jake's hand—the warm, magnetic hand that had so clasped on hers whenever ways were hard; that had so steadied her, not once, but many times. Had she half thanked him? Half enough rejoiced in all his princely ways?

Oh, she had—and always glad to see him; always writing five or seven letters to his one. She loved Jake—grateful now that she had told him so; loved him greatly, even as she cherished Jonathan.

Great Aloneness

There would be a great aloneness with him gone; a chilliness and a want. She would miss the black eyes wooing hers; miss the deep exuberance of his laugh. But more than this, that high, unalterable faith of his that she was sweet; that she was white and as pure as any.

Did Jake know how dear such words could be to her? "White darling"— he said she was that thing and he would shout it to her.

She was not that to a judging world—never that to others. They saw a stain. But he was one to look beyond a deed; beyond a troubled surface to the crystal spring beneath.

How she wanted that! Not even Jennie, who was her mother, had such a trust as Jake. She looked at the glossy waves of hair, the smiling mouth. How mellowed and how fine he was! How desolate that he should here lie quiet.

There would never be a second friend as he had been; never another to look with such clear vision to the inmost soul and know that it had not been hurt; that it was sound and true and grown very strong.

She was indeed alone now—most piercingly alone—and must be always—

David came then and stood beside her—a great sadness in his winning eyes. Strange that he should walk upon her thoughts then—strange that seeing the grief in his face there should come upon her such a flood of aching memory; such a gratitude to the dear and silent friend, that she must speak.

Her words poured out like a blessing—a holy ointment of her thanks. It was due to Jake.

Noblest Things

As though to her own thought she spoke: "Once when life seemed done for me; when it was very hard, Jake came. He said the noblest things. He was as kind. No one knew, not anyone, the greatness that he did."

David looked at her white face and her deep, tremulous eyes. They were filled with tears. He would have told her that he knew Jake's service and blessed him; that he heard Jake's murmur: "Sweeter—whiter—my Helena—" and that he bowed to Jake for that.

But she seemed not to see or care. She seemed then to him more lonely than the dead—lonelier than the picture Emerson had drawn of her that had whipped up in him such a maddening desire to rush down and look at her; see if her face might be the same; speak to her; say out his thoughts—.

She was standing now with an infinite, yearning tenderness on her face as it had been in that last moment when she stooped to put her arms on Jake.

The friend who had helped her and who had her trust was gone. He wondered what she would do now. She would become more aloof—more shut away than ever. More tragic than a death is that—

He said softly: "Yes—there was a greatness in him—he understood."

She turned away sharply, wondering how he came to say a thing like that. Then she added: "How sad that there should come a time when we can not do anything at all for those we love—when we stand silent and let them pass—it seems to me as though all gladness leaves the earth with Jake—"

She tried to smile, but the tears were in her throat. For it was so, indeed. Jake's friendship and his love for her kept her in tune with the brightness of life. It was his way to bring her joys—a flower or a jewel—

No other did this. She had Jennie and Jonathan; Mary and Janina. They had her love.

THE SCHOOL LUNCH-BOX

THE foundation for healthy, successful manhood and womanhood is laid in early years. When the baby is still tiny we give much thought to his food, we see that it is properly planned and prepared, but as he grows, his resistance becomes greater—his strength more vital and many times less attention is paid to his feeding.

Really, the child often exists in spite of wrong feeding, but often too, is delicate and "ailing," with a tendency to a "run-down" condition, and perhaps is a bit dull at school. A wonderful phrase—"run-down." It exactly describes the physical condition of a depleted person—who like a clock—"runs down" because not wound up! Right food is the only thing that can wind up the human body.

At school age, children are under a considerable nervous strain, and are using up quantities of energy in work and play and by the simple process of growing. They are like little engines—"to go" they must have fuel of the right kind at regular intervals. Breakfast starts them right—by noontime they have exhausted this fuel and need more than in the morning.

Enter the lunch-box — the most neglected meal of the day—neglected in two ways — improper planning, combined with an unappetizing appearance.

MUST BALANCE.

The school lunch-box must balance. For example, study the following adequate menus and contrast them with the meals usually provided:

1. Sandwiches of peanut butter and apricot jam, a hard-cooked egg, a ginger cup-cake, an apple, and milk (hot-cold bottle).
2. Sandwiches of bacon and eggs scrambled, jelly sandwiches, cracked walnuts, a pear or orange, sponge-cake and cocoa (hot-cold bottle).
3. Tomato soup (hot-cold bottle), sandwiches of sliced beef (creamed), and of orange marmalade, sugar cookies, a baked custard and an apple.
4. Roll sandwiches of crisp bacon, crab-apple jelly sandwiches, hermits, an orange.

Of course, in many places schools are now serving noon lunches or a few hot dishes that will supplement the lunch from home. Perhaps this is true in your locality and if it isn't, can't you start a movement in your Parent-Teacher Association? A hot lunch or even a hot cup of soup or cocoa is invaluable for the little folks.

If the hot lunch is not available, the home-packed lunch is the next best, but in some cases even this is not convenient and children must buy their lunches from nearby stores. In these cases be sure that they are instructed to buy wholesome sandwiches and milk before they indulge in ice cream or candies. This may seem superfluous advice but stand for ten minutes some lunch-time in the store most convenient to any large school and you will be horrified as I was to see what is purchased and eagerly devoured.

If the lunch is carried from home a metal box that can be folded when empty is most convenient but be sure to punch three or four small holes in it to let in the air. Wrap everything in waxed papers and include two paper napkins, one to put over the desk or lap and one for the hands.

BASIS OF LUNCH.

The basis of the school lunch is of course, good sandwiches. Use whole wheat bread most of the time or brown bread; French rolls, corn bread, raisin or nut bread for a change. Cut the sandwiches in two diagonally and wrap each one separately.

Here are some more lunch suggestions:

1. Whole wheat bread sandwiches, liberally buttered, with a slice of tender meat and two or three leaves of lettuce and a few drops of lemon juice. Whole wheat hermits.
2. Three-tiered sandwiches made of thinly sliced whole wheat bread. Between one of the layers, peanut butter and the other jelly. A good sized raw tomato or cup of stewed tomatoes. Educator crackers.
3. Sandwiches made of Boston brown bread, filling made of cottage cheese mixed with a little strained tomato; place a lettuce leaf over this with a little mayonnaise or boiled dressing. Cookies.
4. Crisp rolls with centres taken out and filled with chopped meat or fish moistened with a little cream sauce or mayonnaise. Two or three stalks of celery—eat part of it last. Rice pudding with raisins, in screw-top jar.
5. Nut bread and butter sandwiches, gingerbread and square of cheese. Apple, pear, peach, or other fresh fruits.
6. Whole wheat bread-and-butter sandwiches. Devilled eggs. Junket in jar-cookie.
7. Salad sandwiches, cup custard, almonds or peanuts.
8. Chopped nuts and ripe olive sandwich. Mix ground nuts and ripe olives with salad-dressing, put between whole wheat bread; leaf of lettuce. Three or four dried figs (thoroughly washed), apple, pear, orange, or other fresh fruit.
9. Cream, Swiss, or other cheese sandwich, made of whole wheat bread. Well-washed dates or figs stuffed with nuts, or some raisins and nuts. Apple, pear, orange, other fresh fruit.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

Ann Lisle

IT has not ceased since his marriage. And yet because of his jealous attitude toward the wife he does not value except as a possession. Bonbright Buchanan dealt what may be a death blow to Park.

Bonnie has legal or ethical cause for objecting to Mabel's friendship with Park. Perhaps in his mind—if he would stop and use it—Bonnie realizes this. But because Mabel is Mrs. Buchanan the man who does not respect his own name thinks he has a right to shut his wife into a cloistered and lonely seclusion.

As I put my counter question to Tom Mason, I was wondering if his attitude toward Irma, if she were his wife, would be much different from Bonnie's attitude toward Mabel.

Tom's answer astonished me.

"Once Irma is mine, it will be my business to see that she doesn't need to turn elsewhere for stimulation. If she had a man friend of your culture and standing and had known him as long and as well as I know you—could I blame her for enjoying a word with him now and then?"

"What are you doing with that?" he demanded, in a voice which whistled on a thin note.

"Irma asked me to give it to you," I said in a level voice.

"She doesn't—want it?" muttered Tom.

"She asked me to give it to you," I repeated.

"Are you sure you didn't insist on her returning it?" he asked.

"I made no comment," I said evasively, knowing that through his mind must be running a bitter recollection of the fact that he had tried to convey the bracelet to Irma secretly.

Tom laughed harshly.

"You made it clear that it's one thing for a man like me to give a bit of his goods first to this one and then to another person, the way a florist offers a good customer a flower—and another thing to pick up a chain or a bit of tapestry from stock and offer it to the one girl as if she were no different from a casual—customer."

"And so you sent this bracelet," I said, feeling utterly inadequate to deal with the situation as Tom was defining it.

"Yes—it means everything."

"And Irma refuses to take it," I said monotonously.

"I wonder if she knows it means everything," Tom muttered, folding his arms back of him and making no move to take the bracelet.

"Do you think a girl like Irma Warren would accept a gift like this unless it meant everything to the man who sent it—and everything to her as well?" I asked.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND LIMBERS UP STIFF JOINTS

Pharmacists call it "Joint-Ease" because it's for Swollen, Sore Painful, Creaky Joints Only.

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain subduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain racked joints as good as new.

They call this new and wonderful preparation "Joint-Ease" because the medical man who turned the trick, worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint-Ease" is prepared only for people who have a swollen, painful, creaky, distorted or stiff joint, whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it is caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action, but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You can use it several times in one evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing. It surely is a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

All druggists dispense it daily for about 60 cents a tube, as do first class druggists everywhere.

Always remember, when Joint-Ease gets in joint agony gets out—quick.

Every rheumatic sufferer ought to send today for free book, "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" (just out). Address H. P. Clearwater, box 806, Hallowell, Maine.

If frequent shaving irritates your skin use

Resinol

Perhaps the daily shave makes your sensitive skin burn and smart, or it may cause a rash which is uncomfortable and embarrassing. RESINOL OINTMENT helps greatly to relieve and clear away such ailments, but RESINOL SHAVING STICK tends to prevent them entirely. Its rich, generous, non-drying lather makes shaving a pleasure because no after-shaving lotions are necessary, and the face is left smooth, cool and soft. Resinol products at all druggists.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Believe It or Not—It Sounds Good

Irene Bordoni confesses that she maintains a trim figure by affecting dull colors when away from the stage. "It has been scientifically established," she declares, "that gay colors in dress have a tendency to add weight to the female figure." That's sad news.

Is Maude Spoofing Dillingham?

Cyril Maude, who does such an amusing bit of acting in "Aren't We All" at the Hollis, indignantly denies that in making up for the part of Lord Grenham he attempts to reproduce the physical beauties of his manager, Mr. Charles Dillingham. Well, possibly.

FERRYING THE STYX IN REGAL STYLE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

UP to the time John Kendrick Bangs startled the fiction feading public with his whimsical "Houseboat on the Styx," news from the world beyond, whether you gathered it from novels or through heavy scientific reports, made pretty solemn reading. Happily, Mr. Bangs changed all that and brought about an entirely new trend of thought on what takes place on Mr. Charon's well known, if not over popular, ferry line. "The Houseboat on the Styx" became a "best seller" and the world chuckled and smiled, and had a fine, happy time with a lot of prominent folk residing in the inevitable hereafter.

* * *

NOW comes the drama to carry on for Mr. Bangs—to shout a message of good cheer from the land beyond the grave. The outstanding novelty of the last twelve months of theatrical effort is Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound," in which the old ferry on the Styx is supplanted by a floating palace of the Leviathan type, with accommodations for only first-class passengers. No humble ferryman in loose robes and a flowing beard presides over this modern venture into the unknown—no, sir. A smart steward, equally efficient in service behind the ship's bar as well as dispensing good advice, is the chief officer of Mr. Vane's strange craft. And it is a very strange boat, with a most unusual passenger list, for in spite of their modern habiliments and their generally natural conduct you discover early in the play that they are just ordinary mortals, tripping merrily onward to immortality—or wherever you go at the end of life's journey.

* * *

"OUTWARD BOUND" last season made a deep impression upon the blase Broadway playgoer—tipped him on end and sent him home finally convinced that death had lost its sting. And now the local theatregoer is to have an early opportunity to speculate on the future as Mr. Vane writes it. One thing is dead certain—the hardened sinner is going to make himself believe the author is right.

* * *

IS THERE any genuine school of acting that rises in superiority above the talent of those who toiled faithfully for the drama in the generation gone by? Arthur Byron, who does more than a fair bit of good acting in "Spring Cleaning," lifts a well trained eyebrow and remarks that there is really no modern school of acting at all—never has been. "Or better still," he exclaims, "no matter what age we may be facing, we are always beset by idle chatter about the modern school—but it is just chatter, simply that and nothing more. It takes more than some obscure thought on how acting should be done to make a good actor. I recall some advice given me by my father when he was an old man, but still one of our foremost artists. His career on the stage had spanned some fifty years. 'My boy', he said, 'don't ever let anyone mislead you into believing there is any new twist to acting that is going to lift you higher in your profession than you can achieve by ordinary hard work and honest effort.'

* * *

"AND then father clinched his argument. 'When I was a boy of eight,' he told me, 'and my job was to run errands for members of a stock company, check up the laundry lists and such things, I used to hear a lot of discussion on the subject of the modern school. I didn't pay much attention to it, but when I was twenty-five and had become the leading man in an important company I suddenly recalled that actors, directors and producers were still worrying about the modern school. And so it went throughout my life—there was always the bogey of the modern school, and that's all it ever will be.' "

* * *

THAT was the opinion of Oliver Doud Byron, whose rare gifts are remembered by thousands of playgoers of middle age, and also it is the opinion of his no less talented son, Arthur Byron, who has contributed so much to make "Spring Cleaning" the most impressive of our early season dramatic fare. "The modern school," added Mr. Byron, "is always with us—always has been. But good actors just go ahead and act and that's all there is to it."

Bebe Daniels Discovers New Way to Reduce

Attention all ye women who are unpleasingly plump! Bebe Daniels, noted screen star, has made a discovery that will interest you. She has found the best reducing process ever brought to the attention of a long-suffering, flesh-laden female. Just go to Nassau in the month of June and work!

When Miss Daniels, Richard Dix and a company of Paramount players returned to New York from the Bahama Islands where scenes were made for "Sinners in Heaven," now showing at the Fenway, it was discovered that every one had lost weight. Miss Daniels was ten pounds lighter and Dix had lost fifteen pounds.

"You don't have to do a thing," explained Bebe, "The tropical sun just bakes the excess flesh away."

Miriam's First Salary Just Box of Candy

Miriam Hopkins, the dainty ingenue of "Little Jessie James," at the Wilbur first showed an aptitude for the stage when she was nine years old. It was in Savannah, her home town, at which time she organized a stock company from among her school chums of boys and girls and put on plays in the barn of her home. Admission was 2 cents for a reserved seat and so quickly did the shows catch on that it was but a few weeks before enough money was taken in to pay the actors. Miriam's stipend weekly used to be a box of candy.

For her faithful adherence to her work since joining Mr. Weber's official family and also because she has more than made good, Miss Hopkins is to be co-starred in a new American comedy Mr. Weber is to produce next year entitled "Mr. Man."

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

TREMONT—Irene Bordoni in "Little Miss Bluebeard." A comedy by Avery Hopwood, who acknowledges indebtedness for the idea to Gabriel Dregeley, an Hungarian playwright. In this play Miss Bordoni has four songs. In the supporting cast are Arthur Margetson, Eric Blore, Gordon Ash, William Eville, Clara Mackin and Eva Leonard Boyne.

* * *

SELWYN—William Hodge in "For All of Us." In which Mr. Hodge appears as both star and author. A comedy of American life that is sprinkled with homespun philosophy and a full measure of Mr. Hodge's quaint humor. The company includes Frank Losee, Helen Flint, Marion Abbott, Frank Burbeck and Courteney White.

* * *

COPLEY—Harry Green in "Clubs Are Trumps," a comedy on golf by Leslie Hickson and W. Lee Dickson. Mr. Green served faithfully as a vaudeville headliner before he was selected for the stella role in this play. In the company are May Collins, John Davidson, Margery Meadows, Josephine Deffrey and James B. Barrett. Produced by Walter Hast.

* * *

LOEW'S STATE—Marion Davies in "Yolanda." Picturization of Charles Major's delightfully romantic novel of old France in which Miss Davies is said to reach new heights in artistic achievement. Supporting Miss Davies are Lyn Harding, Holbrook Blinn, Ralph Graves, Leon Errol, Maclyn Arbuckle and Theresa Maxwell Conover. A Cosmopolitan production.

* * *

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—De Wolf Hopper in Oscar Strauss' "The Chocolate Soldier." Revival of a once popular operetta, with Mr. Hopper appearing as the pompous, bristling Colonel. Especially engaged for this presentation is Forrest Huff, who has played the title role more than 1,000 times.

* * *

SOMERVILLE—(Stock) "Connie Goes Home," an American comedy-drama by Edward Childs Carpenter, adapted from a popular story by Fanny Kilbourne. Miss Dentler and Mr. Lilley will have the principal roles.

* * *

ST. JAMES—(Stock) "Polly of the Circus," an old but always popular play about circus folk. Kay Hammond will be seen as Polly.

Fred Stone Holds World's Record for Stability

While several theatrical stars have dignified themselves with the title, "a national institution," it would seem that Fred Stone, who comes to the Colonial in "Stepping Stones" on Monday, October 6th, might be given the greatest claim to the title. When Fred Stone begins his run at the Colonial Theatre in "Stepping Stones" he also will begin his nineteenth consecutive season under the management of Charles Dillingham. The Stone-Dillingham association has lasted longer than that of any other actor and manager. Mr. Stone has given almost 6,000 performances under Mr. Dillingham's management and has appeared before more than 9,000,000 people.

Man's Deadliest Enemies Are His Friends

Frank Sinclair of "Mr. Battling Butler" at the Majestic, admits that a fellow's best friends can sometimes put him in bad with his family.

Recently, while rehearsing, he told his wife he would drive home in his own car.

The schedule time for Frank's returning was the following afternoon. At supper time when he did not show up his wife began to worry. At midnight she aroused her sister and requested her to send telegrams inquiring for her husband. At six o'clock the next morning Sinclair came along the road with his car hitched behind a pair of slow moving mules.

Thirty minutes later five telegrams were received from their friends in the city and each read: "Yes, Frank is spending the night with us."

NOVELTIES IN SYMPHONY PREMIERE

Conductor Koussevitzky Announces Program for First Concerts

Koussevitzky

Serge Koussevitzky, the new conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now announces the program with which he will make his first appearance in this country both at the opening of the symphony season on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, October 10 and 11, and at the second pair of concerts on October 17 and 18. Mr. Koussevitzky will assemble the orchestra for its first rehearsal next Thursday morning.

The first program will consist of a concerto of Vivaldi, arranged for orchestra by Siloti, Weber's Overture to "Oberon," two Wagerian excerpts — the Bacchanale from "Tannhauser" and the Funeral March from the "Dusk of the Gods," Honegger's "Pacific 231" (describing an American locomotive in motion), and Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstasy."

The second program will include Handel's Concerto Grosso in D minor, a Dance of Debussy, arranged by Ravel, deFalla's "Love Magic" (first performance in America), and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor.

Intelligence, Not Beauty, Wins De Wolfe Hopper

"I am not trying to claim that intelligence and personality will make a pug nose straight, mind you," says De Wolf Hopper, the tall comedian now appearing at the Boston Opera House this evening, "but I do say that a reasonably intelligent mind makes up for a lot of beauty. There is no one who can say exactly what constitutes a beautiful woman, but her personality can make or break her.

"A broad smile goes farther than any of the baby-doll faces and Cupid's bow lips," he continued. "Naturally, the woman with the broad smile has a mouth large enough to be open to criticism. But I'd prefer that smile to the best shaped mouth in the world. Beauty is a matter of personal opinion. I do think that many men like the doll-faced type. They demand little intelligence from a woman."

Mr. Shea Leads a Double Life

Dennis F. Shea, general press representative for the local Erlanger theatres, is a versatile chap. In addition to his duties as a dispenser of valuable theatrical information, he will hereafter serve as resident manager of the Park Theatre, just taken over by Mr. Erlanger.

He Should Have Been a Minister

Johnnie Walker Hundley, of the "Little Jessie James" company at the Wilbur, is the first member of his family to embrace the stage for a living. Five generations of Johnnie Walker Hundleys have been Baptist ministers, and his father is the dean at Doane College in Ohio.

Mrs. Lyman Joins Exodus of Smart Folk to French Capital

By BETTY ALDEN.

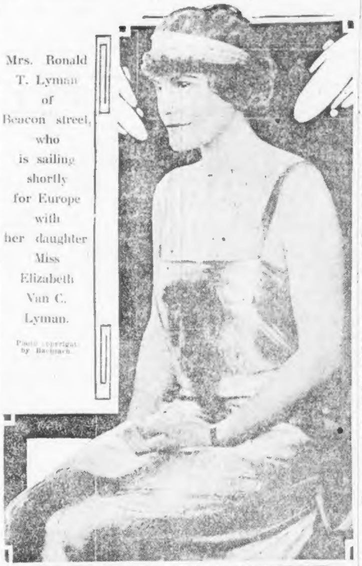
AND yet another prominent matron has engaged passage for the other side.

This time it's Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman of Beacon street, who is taking with her her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Van C. Lyman. The latter, who is still a sub-debutante, will spend a year studying in a private school near Paris.

It is certainly to be hoped that Mrs. Lyman will return to these shores before society's jolliest season is over. What with "peppy" Mrs. Reggie Foster, Mrs. Hendricks H. Whitman and Mrs. John L. Saltonstall spending the Winter in Paris, the ranks of the fashionable set revolving about the senior supper dances are rapidly being depleted.

Mrs. Lyman, who with her family divides her time between the Beacon street residence and the home in Waltham, has just been visiting for a bit with her parents, General and Mrs. James Parker, at Green Vale Farm in Newport.

Mrs. Lyman was to have sailed from New York today on board the Leviathan, but as that giant ship is to remain in drydock longer than was first expected, I presume Mrs. Lyman will be aboard her when she leaves New York a week from today.



Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman of Beacon street, who is sailing shortly for Europe with her daughter Miss Elizabeth Van C. Lyman.

MENTIONING Newport reminds me of the campaign being waged by certain prominent matrons for a "bigger, better, billboardless" Newport.

With accent on the billboardless, as I believe the Queen Resort is quite large and good enough to suit its colonists.

Anyway, it all goes to show what a little enthusiasm, combined with stick-to-it-iveness and "pep" will do. Among the strongest opponents of this class of advertising has been Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James. So strongly did Mrs. James feel on the subject that she spoke at a meeting of the representative council held at Newport the other evening, advocating the passage of an ordinance forbidding the further erection of billboards there.

Nor did Mrs. James' eloquence fail to bear fruit. The city council passed the ordinance, no more billboards will mar the landscape of little Rhody's famous Summer playground, and the local gas company has already removed a large number of these signs on Wellington avenue, thereby allowing a view of the harbor at this point.

It was on board the James's yacht, the "Alhoa," that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith of Mt. Vernon street made their delightful cruise around the world with Mr. and Mrs. James a few Summers ago.

MR. AND MRS. LAWRENCE T. PAUL of Newport have concluded their visit with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell of Marlboro street at their Summer place at Osterville on the Cape.

Society Notes

Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears are giving a dance this evening at their Beverly Cove home for their daughter, Miss Emily Sears.

Mrs. W. Murray Crane will occupy an apartment this Winter at No. 820 Fifth avenue, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lancaster Morgan, who spent part of the Summer on the North Shore, are now at Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore P. Grosvenor of Brookline have ended their Newport sojourn at the Muenchinger King.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hill Thorndike have closed their home in Bar Harbor and are returning to their town house at No. 175 Marlboro street.

Also leaving Bar Harbor this week were Mrs. Lansing P. Reed and Mrs. Morton L. Fearey, both of New York. Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Fearey are daughters of Bishop and Mrs. William Lawrence of Boston.

Otis Skinner Best Hamlet by Twenty Minutes

Amusing incidents are all the while happening back of the curtain line of a theatre. Stage hands and property men who make up the personnel of the local staff of any playhouse behind the footlights are "quaint," to say the least, and more than this—their opinions of plays and players are particularly pointed. Ethel Barrymore, now playing at the Colonial in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," recently stood in the "wings" of a theatre where she was playing and listened to the stage hands discuss in an undertone the various Hamlets they had seen. Of course, Edwin Booth was conceded a great Hamlet, but Fechter, Edward H. Sothern, the late Creston Clarke, Walter Whiteside and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson all had their adherents. Then one of the electricians cut into the conversation: "You fellows can talk about your Hamlets, but Otis Skinner for mine! He gives a bully performance in the first place, and rings down from twenty to thirty minutes sooner than anybody else I ever worked a lamp for. Me for Mr. Skinner every time."

San Carlo Opera to Play Here in November

Direct from its eighth successful season in New York, the San Carlo Grand Opera Company comes to the Boston Opera House for two weeks, beginning November 3. It was fifteen years ago that the Boston Opera House first opened its doors, and the opera was "La Gioconda," the same work that will open the San Carlo engagement five weeks hence.

DEMAND TRAINS BE RESTORED

Citizens of Atlantic Call New Haven's Cut "Insulting and Injurious"

Claiming that Atlantic has been accorded "insulting and injurious treatment" by the New Haven Railroad in connection with the reduction of train service, residents of the community today began a campaign to compel restoration of some, if not all, of the discontinued trains.

They will carry the fight to the Public Utilities, according to W. B. Wight of No. 78 Webster street, Atlantic.

Only five and one-half miles from Boston, the populous community has been presented with one of the dizziest train schedules ever inflicted upon a village in Eastern Massachusetts, in the opinion of the residents.

Speaking for the others, Mr. Wight today said he would base his fight for a revision of the schedule on the following facts:

Train service out of Boston to Braintree has been cut nearly 50 per cent. Only four trains leave Boston for Atlantic in the forenoon under the new schedule.

Train service out of Atlantic into Boston in the afternoon has been riddled, only five leaving Atlantic between noon and midnight.

Great gaps have been left in the schedule at busy parts of the day, while, again, other trains leave only a few minutes apart.

"What they want to do is come as near depriving us of train service as they dare, and force the Boston Elevated to come to our relief," said Mr. Wight.

"To that the objection is that most of us moved to Atlantic to escape the Elevated."

Glaring inconsistencies in the schedule are pointed out, and it is the contention of the embattled residents of Atlantic that the schedule was not scientifically prepared, with any intention of rendering the best possible service.

There is no train from Boston to Atlantic, for instance, from 6:27 in the morning until 9:50.

Yet every day, except Saturdays, one Boston train stops at Atlantic at 5:50 in the afternoon and another at 6:00, and every day one stops at 6:38.

5 MINUTES, THEN 2 HOURS.

In the evening one Boston train stops at Atlantic at 9:43 and another at 9:48. Then there is a hiatus. The next train from Boston arrives at 11:38, probably the most marked inconsistency of all.

There is no train from Atlantic to Boston from 8:23 in the morning until 10:03. Then another steps in sharply at 10:19.

On Saturdays there are five trains into Boston from Atlantic from noon to midnight, but on weekdays, only four, according to the new schedule.

One leaves at 1:21 in the afternoon and then there is silence until 5:15. At 5:31 another leaves.

The last train out of Atlantic to Boston leaves the former community at 7:26 o'clock in the evening.

SHOTS HALT TWO IN STOLEN MOTOR CAR

Two alleged automobile thieves were caught in a stolen car in Roxbury today after an exciting chase in which policemen fired many shots one of which blew a tire off the fleeing machine.

The youths charged with stealing the machine gave their names as Vincent Scott, aged 18, of No. 16 Fayette street, Cambridge, and Otto B. Jones, aged 20, of No. 411 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

Patrolman Fitzgerald of the Dudley street station, and Heffernan of the Roxbury Crossing were standing at Massachusetts and Columbus avenues when they saw the youths drive by in the stolen car. The officers were suspicious and ordered the car to halt. Instead, the occupants "stepped on the gas."

Procuring another car the officers gave chase down Columbus avenue.

When it seemed certain the fleeing machine would outdistance the officer's car, the policemen opened fire. The car ahead continued with unabated speed.

When one of the bullets struck a rear tire, however, the car swerved sharply and came near turning over at the junction of Ruggles street and Columbus avenue. The officers, with drawn revolvers, captured the youths as they were leaping from the machine.

The car was stolen some hours earlier from a street in Cambridge where it had been parked.

Among the features will be specialty dances by Ruth Libby of St. Botolph street, Boston, and Ernestine Fanti of New York City.

The guests of honor will include President Pendleton, Dean Tufts, Dean Waite and Mrs. Hunt of the reading and speaking department. The officers of the Barnswallows will be in the receiving line.

COUNT JAILED FOR ROBBING AMERICANS

Florence, Italy, Sept. 27.—Count Emilio Rasponi, local manager of the American Express Company, was arrested here today, charged with having systematically, for two years, defrauded clients by overcharging them for government taxes on export shipments of art and other objects.

He attempted to commit suicide when he was being taken to the police station and was instead taken to a hospital, where it was found he had a passport to leave Italy. Many Americans were among the victims.

PROMISES TO BEHAVE HIMSELF

Wealthy Realtor Who Married His Youthful Stenographer Turns Over New Leaf

Having looked into the matter thoroughly for two months, J. A. B. Shaw, millionaire Boston and Newtonville realtor, and his stenographer bride, Madeline McGillies, chalked themselves up with an error each today and agreed that thorns have a way of hiding among the roses.

Their romance was one of those May and December affairs, except that this one culminated in July with the marriage and that the war began in September when she had him arrested for excessive exuberance aggravated by hard liquor.

Today in Newton Court the millionaire stood up like a man, pleaded guilty to drunkenness, took a year's probation and then announced that his marriage was a mistake, but even so, he was going to see it through.

He is going back with his stenographer-bride of two months and turn over a new leaf.

The bride did not say much following the arraignment, but as they were leaving court together she agreed that the marriage was nothing to guffaw over now, even if they did think it a happy event in July.

"All our trouble has been over money," the fifty-four-year-old realtor said frankly, but just then he was not within earshot of his twenty-eight-year-old bride. "She wants to spend too much money. I think she married me for my money."

Then the millionaire declared he was sorry for everything he had done and promised himself not to break loose again.

Since the row that brought the police into the pretentious Shaw home at No. 587 Lowell avenue, Newtonville, Mrs. Shaw, it was revealed today, has been staying with friends on Cape Cod.

COMPROMISE WITH JAPS ON LEAGUE PROTOCOL

Geneva, Sept. 27 (I.N.S.)—British and Italian delegations to the League of Nations today accepted the compromise suggestion of Louis Loucheur of France that Japan's amendment be attached to Article 5 of the arbitration protocol. This concession to Japan was made after Japan refused yesterday to accept the arbitration protocol. The Japanese amendment stipulates that the new arbitration provisions leave unaffected the functions of the League of Nations council for promoting internal peace. In other words it pits the power of the council against that of the World Court.

DIES AS LOCOMOTIVE PLUNGES INTO RIVER

New York, Sept. 27.—John Gray, a locomotive engineer, was believed to have been drowned today when the switch engine on which he was in charge got beyond control on a Brooklyn pier and plunged into the East River.

The throttle apparently wide open, the runaway engine plunged off the pier with a splash that could be heard for blocks, into the water and mud.

Police believe the throttle of the engine was accidentally thrown open by the engineer and that he did not have time to close it before the locomotive crashed from the pier.

SAVANT WOULD EXPLOIT INTERIOR OF EARTH

New York, Sept. 27.—Explorers of the future will turn their eyes toward the center of the earth instead of its Polar regions if they follow the suggestion of Sir Charles Algernon Parsons, British scientist, who advocates the formation of a corporation to sink a shaft twelve miles into the earth's [illegible]. Sir Charles believes that such a project would be more profitable scientifically and economically than any Polar expedition of the past.

YALE SEEKS MATERIAL FOR GUARDS AND TACKLES

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 27.—Yale football coaches are scouring the university for added material for the guard and tackle positions.

All the veterans were graduated last June and the substitute material from last year's varsity squad and from the freshman team last year has not yielded as promising timber as Myron Fuller, the line coach, expected.

Some of the giants who were on the scrubs last year, but who have not yet reported, are expected to be enrolled to begin next week's drill.

Only sixty reported to Head Coach Tad Jnes ten days ago. The freshman squad, under Pat Osbourne, added 125 more candidates and Johnny Blossom, the university athletic director, is forming a class football squad which will bring to the gridiron several hundred more candidates and result, it is hoped, in an increase in the quality and quantity of the varsity guard and tackle squads.

Only a single member of the guard squad has been in varsity competition.

Dick Eckhart was used in less than half of the games last Fall and was rated as only a third string player.

Emile Coene, who has been assigned the other guard position, was a member of the scrubs last year, but did not figure in 'varsity football.

From the freshman squad Wortham and Wallace have been selected as the second team guards.

Their lack of experience has made it clear that the guards which Yale will present against Harvard and Princeton will be chosen late in the season.

TACKLES INEXPERIENCED.

The tackle material is fully as inexperienced, although Johnny Joss and Ben Butterworth, who have been assigned the positions, played in several games last Fall. Richards, star fo the freshman eleven last year, is on even terms with both of the first string selections and Root, his companion freshman guard last Fall, is the other second string selection at present.

Next to the scarcity of heavy line material, the coaches have been troubled by the lack of brilliant punting and dropkicking material.

Eddie Cottle, who was third string selection last Fall, has been selected for this role in the opening games, with Jerry Wadsworth and Dan Allen, as the most promising of the former freshman players.

SHEPPARD DENIES HE RAN OUT OF BOUT WITH RED CHAPMAN

"So I ran out of a bout, according to Red Chapman," said Johnny Sheppard, the Woburn tinker, as he took a particularly vicious smash at the sand bag. "I'll show him next Friday night whether I ducked that fight. Suffolk A. A. fans will be able to judge for themselves.

"I never claimed a championship of any kind in my life," the blond tiger cub continued, "but for about fifteen minutes next Friday night I will hold two titles. They are the New England featherweight title, which Chapman claims, and the American junior featherweight championship.

"But fifteen minutes after I win these I'll hand them back to Red. I don't want them. I have beaten Abe Attell Goldstein, and I can beat him whenever I get the chance again. The only title I want is that of bantamweight champion of the world. Eight ounces of flesh lost that title for me when I met Goldstein in Boston.

"I could have made 118 easily enough. But the canny New Yorkers told me I had to come in overweight or there would be no fight. I wouldn't disappoint the Boston fans, and so I fought under those conditions. I won, but I couldn't claim the title, exactly what Goldstein had figured out."

Eighteen Penn Men Build Reputations as Coaches

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—That Penn is still contributing her quota to athletic ranks will be seen by a glance at the football guide, which lists no less than eighteen Red and Blue coaches who are drilling the young idea in various sections of the United States.

Locally there is Lew Young, Bert Bell, et al., at Pennsylvania; Johnny Dern at Germantown Academy; Heinie Miller at St. Joseph's; J. W. Saner at Darby High; Billy Maher at La Salle Prep and Dutch Sommers at Villanova.

Lou Little directs the fortunes of the Georgetown aggregation, while Vincent Welch takes care of the Hobart College warriors, and Bob Folwell pilots the Naval Academy.

Roy Mercer, of course, is a fixture at Swarthmore, as is Cy Pauxtis at Pennsylvania Military College. Harold Parker guides the destinies of the College of the City of New York, while John Heisman is in the wilds of Texas experimenting with Rice Institute.

Andy Smith reigns at California as usual, but with Glenn Warner of Cornell at Stamford Andy will have to watch his step this Fall. Pat Dwyer, noted as one of Penn's best centres, is again at the helm at Toledo University, while Mike Bennett, long guardian of Chestnut Hill's fortunes, has selected the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and will put it on the football map.

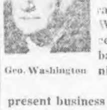
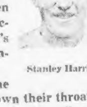
"First in War, First in Peace, and (at Last) FIRST in American League!"

THE old order changeth. "Washington! First in war, first in peace and LAST in the American League!" Away back in the days of Ward and Vokes, down through the days of McIntyre and Heath, stage comedians pulled that line on the Washington baseball team. Newspapers ran it the world over. Even Washington began to accept the national capital's baseball status as a perennial joke.



Geo. Washington



Stanley Harris

All of which makes the present business of ramming it back down their throats so much sweeter—to Washington. The cringing tail-end Washington joke team is no more. The worm has turned into a clawing, swashbuckling baseball bobcat. And Stanley Harris, youngest manager in the big league, brought about this metamorphosis.

MALONEY WINS SLUGGING BEE FROM GARDNER

By JACK CONWAY

JIM MALONEY'S ponderous punches beat Tom Gardner into submission in the third round of their battle at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building. The South Boston warrior ended the mill by putting over a sharp left hook to the jaw, followed by a right hand sock to the body.

Although the tussle only lasted three frames, it furnished the fans with a flock of thrills. In the first round the frolic looked very one-sided. Maloney paraded from his corner at the bell and knocked Gardner around at will. A solid left to the chin sent the Pacific Coast heavyweight champion down for a short count. When Gardner resumed battling he looked rather weary. Few figured he would last the round, but he surprised everybody by being on the job when the bell sounded.

It was a different story in the second frame. In his eagerness to win by a quick knockout, Maloney didn't get a great deal of direction to his blows. He was as wild as the proverbial hawk. Gardner took advantage of the situation and rocked the South Boston entry with ing a mixup at close quarters Maloney was tired when the session ended.

Both men started swinging punches in the third chapter. During a mixup at close quarters, Maloney sprawled to the canvas, while Gardner also lost his balance and tipped over. Later Gardner lost his balance again and dove through the ropes into the arms of an occupant of a seat close to the ring.

Maloney then got a little more pep behind his blows and knocked Gardner through the ropes with a sock to the jaw. The Pacific Coast warrior resumed hostilities as soon as he got back into the ring.

Both men were very tired at this stage of the game. Each realized his own condition and tried hard for a kayo. Maloney forced Gardner back and dropped him to the canvas with a left hook to the jaw and a short right hand wallop to the jaw. Gardner struggled to his feet at the count of ten, but the referee stopped the mill.

* * *

NEWSBOY BROWN of Sioux City, Iowa, was awarded the decision over Frankie Murray of Philadelphia in the semi-final of ten rounds. This was a fast, clever tussle, with both boys scoring some effective punches. The boxers were very evenly matched, which took away from the contest some of the thrills the fans got when a clever boxer is pitted against a rugged puncher whom he can hit at will.

* * *

TOM KIRBY of Roxbury, who won the national amateur light-heavyweight title last year, won over Jack McLellan of Somerville in a stirring eight-round bout. Kirby displayed a world of class in his debut as a professional. This contest was very close, some of the fans figuring that McLellan had a slight margin.

* * *

ROCKY STONE of Roxbury and Henry Van Patten of this city furnished the comedy, as expected. Van Patten was in much better condition than when he last battled Stone. He went after Rocky in the first session much like a motorcycle cop sails after a speeding autoist. He pinned left and right hand wallops on Stone's noble chin with reckless abandon. On one occasion Rocky found it necessary to rest on the canvas for the count of seven.

When Van Patten continued his whirlwind attack in the second stanza Rocky got tired and took a short rest on the canvas. After Referee Ed Dixon awarded Van Patten the bout, Stone's heart swelled with indignation and he threatened to resume hostilities. Then somebody blew a traffic cop's whistle and Rocky took himself out into the great outdoors.

* * *

IT WAS a pleasant evening for the young men who play the favorites, other than for the scare they received when Gardner made his spurt in the second round of his mill with Maloney.

YANK CASTOFF PROVES GAME IS HONEST

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1924, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Is baseball honest?

Alex Ferguson, a pitcher discarded by the Yankees, beat Washington and the great Walter Johnson by a supreme pitching effort, keeping the Yankees in the American pennant fight.

Had Ferguson permitted his discharge by the Yankees to rankle, had he permitted his feelings to overcome his sense of duty, he might have eased up at a critical moment in his pitching.

Ferguson's club, the Boston Red Sox, does not figure in the fight. His victory was advantageous mainly to the Yankees, the club that he wasn't good enough for.

What were Ferguson's thoughts as he saw by the score board that the Yankees were beating the Athletics and realized that if he whipped Washington his old team mates would be only one game behind?

They must have been interesting.

* * *

ONE or two slight moves on Ferguson's part, moves that never could have been detected—an easy pitch to a hard hitter, a ball thrown wide on the plate—would have given the game to Washington.

No one would have seen anything unusual in the fact of the great Johnson being returned victorious over a bunch of baseball weaklings such as the Boston Red Sox. They would have expected it.

But Ferguson, as the report says, "pitched excellently" for Boston and his teammates, many of them also Yankee cast-offs, played hard against the Washington club.

* * *

THE writer has heard the whisper in various quarters the past few weeks that the other clubs of the American League were "laying down" to the Washingtonians.

Many credulous persons seem to believe these whispers. They think the success of the Washington club is due to a deliberate plot to help them beat out the Yankees, rather than to superior playing.

Of course those who know baseball pay no attention to such nonsense. The defeat of Washington by a Yankee cast-off should effectually dispel suspicion in the minds of those who DON'T KNOW baseball.

* * *

ANY man fired from his job, or disposed of in such manner as to reflect on his ability, naturally feels sore, naturally harbors thoughts of revenge.

That is only human nature.

Few men can take a dismissal with a smile, few men are willing to admit that a dismissal is justified.

In baseball, the common manifestation of irritation over a dismissal is an effort to bring about the defeat of the former employer.

* * *

URBAN SHOCKER, the great spitball player of the Browns, always hated the Yankees because they traded him to St. Louis. He could be counted on to pitch desperately against them, and often whipped them mainly through his own individual effort.

But if you look up the baseball records you will find that Shocker even more often HELPED the Yankees by beating clubs that were the chief contenders against the New Yorkers.

And the writer believes that there are very few, if any ball players in the big leagues, who would permit their personal feelings in this respect outweigh their sense of DUTY, of HONESTY.

SCHOOLBOY GRID STARS GET GOING IN EARNEST TODAY

OLD RIVALS IN EARLY BATTLES

By FRED C. LANE

So interesting are the scholastic games slated for this afternoon that one has trouble deciding just what contest to take in. As a general rule early season games are of an uncertain variety with the stronger teams using the weaker ones as trial horses.

Such conditions do not exist today, however, with the Medford-Brockton, B. C. High and Malden or the Cambridge Latin-Salem teams in action, three real midseason games, not to speak of the many other important contests on the card.

For intersectional interest that battle between Brockton and Medford tops the bill. Last season the Medford delegation took the game as a joke and they are still repenting. Coach Jim Mansfield has impressed upon his lads the importance of playing their best game to score a victory.

Brockton is even stronger than last year. Medford cannot boast any too much in this respect. The loss of Bill Leary, the husky full back and kicker will be keenly felt by the Medford team.

B. C. HI. HAS HARD FIGHT.

Brockton invades their opponents territory with the same team that won last year with two exceptions and judging from reports coming from the Shoe City these two vacancies have been well taken care of.

Coach Jack Heaphy of Boston College High is not committing himself on the outcome of his contest with Malden only to say that they will give them a hard fight.

This is something characteristic of the Maroon and Gold team and should Malden win, they will realize they have met one of the strongest opponents on their schedule.

Coach Batchelder of Malden has a veteran team with which to work. Nineteen of the lads that played against Arlington last Saturday have had two, three or are playing their fourth year of fooball.

Many of these boys have matched their wits against B. C. High in past years and know what to expect from the James street delegation.

Coach Leander McDonald, with his revamped Cambridge Latin squad, is ready to do battle with Bill Broderick's Salem High team.

McDonald has been building up his team the past three years until now he feels he has reached a point where his squad will demand recognition from all the clubs in the Suburban League.

BIG NORTH SHORE GAME.

The North Shore League is not to be overlooked, with such teams as Peabody and Winthrop meeting on the new Peabody Field. This is a contest that carries considerable importance since each club is looked upon as the leading contender for honors in the circuit.

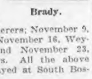
Pere Marquette Squad All Ready to Open Gridiron Season

The Pere Marquette football team will open its season tomorrow afternoon at the C. J. Lee playgrounds, South Boston, playing the strong Village A. A. team of Roxbury.

Hurley.

The squad has been working out for the past few weeks under Coaches Leo Daley, John Povah and Eddie Dullea. Many veterans of last year's team will be on hand, including Manning, Santry, Plansky, Leo O'Brien, Russo, Captain O'Leary, McDonough, McClosky, Gibson, Asa O'Brien, Banks, Deeley, Hurley, Sheehan, Whalen, McNevin, McMahon and Barron.

Gubby Norton, Arthur Woodley, Pat Concannon and Johnnie Nolte are a few of the new players.



Brady.

Manager King has arranged a hard schedule as follows: October 5, Chevron Football Association; October 12, Dorchester Town Team; October 19, Whitman A. C.; October 26, East Greenwich, R. I.; November 2, Neponset Wanderers; November 9, Rockland A. A.; November 16, Weymouth A. A., and November 23, Quincy Wanderers. All the above games will be played at South Boston.

MIDWICK CLUB AFTER POLO TITLE TODAY

New York, Sept. 27.—The sensational Midwick Club polo four of Los Angeles, national junior champions, will make their bid for the national open title today when they encounter Tommy Hitchcock's Wanderers in the deciding match at International field, Westbury.

The Californians, led by Eric Pedley, as their outstanding star, have gone through eastern polo ranks in meteoric fashion this season, but they face their hardest assignment when they tackle the Wanderers.

Besides Hitchcock, hero of America's international cup triumph over Great Britain, the team includes Louis Stoddard, veteran internationalist, and Elmer J. Boeseke, Jr., member of the Olympic team. B. K. Gatins, regular No. 3 of the Wanderers, who was injured when thrown from his mount Wednesday, will not be able to play. His place will be taken by Henry Lacey, brother of Louis Lacey, captain of the British internationalists.

The Midwicks will take the field with their regular line-up, composed of Miller, Pedley, Perkins and Burke.

This contest will be the second part of a double-header, for the Hurricanes and Middle Neck Farm will meet in the opening match of the Monty Waterbury cup tournament an hour before the Midwick-Wanderers tussle, slated for 3:30 P. M.

THE largest crowd of boxing fans in history of Brockton turned out to watch the bouts held by the Brockton A. A. The main go was between George Kid Lee, holder of the New England lightweight title, and Jimmy Fruzetti of Brockton, the latter winning the decision.

Jimmie Fruzetti

Fruzetti won seven out of 10 rounds and got the judges' decision. Lee flashed in the third round, the sixth and seventh being even while the winner carried the other seven.

The semi-final between Jimmy Smith of Brockton and Bennie Cowettie of Manchester ended in the second round, when Smith's seconds threw the towel into the ring.

HUB FANS CHEER SENATORS

Howling Throngs Defeat Own Purpose

By NICK FLATLEY

NO stranger spectacle has been seen in Boston, famed for its loyalty to the native, than that of some 12,000 fans in Fenway Park cheering enthusiastically and continuously for a visiting club to beat the Red Sox. The Washington Senators were paid that tribute for a game and startling battle for a pennant, when they came here to open the series that will settle their fate within a day or so. Even the hallowed tradition of the seventh inning was shattered. The mob—consider 12,000 on Friday with the Sox in last place—rose in the visitors' half and yelled long and loud for Walter Johnson and the rest. Even in the worst of all recent gloomy days that has never happened.

* * *

IT ALL went to show how popular the downfall of one of the New York clubs will be. Baseball fans throughout the country have soured on the Gotham reign of glory. The war correspondents with the Senators tell us that practically the same condition existed everywhere. Even in Detroit, where dashed pennant hopes might have soured the faithful on the Washington troupe, more or less responsible for said dashing, the Harris athletes were applauded to the echo. The great Walter Johnson, who made good in the large leagues about the time the boys were coming back from the Civil War, has created as much commotion all along the line as the Prince of Wales.

* * *

A NEW champion will be a fine for the game, but there isn't a new champion yet. The Yanks refuse to quit, and the Senators still have that deciding pastime out in front of them. Theirs is a nervous life until it's settled. The howling throngs at the Fenway really defeated their own purpose.

DEMPSEY WILL STAY AROUND FOR FIGHT

By JOSEPH MULVANEY

HERE'S a hint from headquarters for the speedy settlement of the heavyweight problem.

It came directly from Jack Dempsey while he was working out in Stillman's gymnasium. It isn't brand new, but it is logical—maybe that is what's the matter with it—but, anyway, listen to Jack telling it:

"The whole country seems full of legitimate candidates for my heavyweight title, but the trouble is that they are almost all acting candidates touring and acting.

Now if they'd only stop arguing and start in fighting, everybody would know just what was behind all the contenders very soon—and then I'd be able to do some ring work, which would be a lot to my liking."

The champion admitted he was not hopeful there would be series of genuine elimination bouts to develop an opponent but he said:

"If somebody would start something, I'd be able to get into condition with two months of heavy work."

Dempsey said he had not closed any contract for a vaudeville engagement. He plans to remain in New York for about two months and will do light work in the gymnasium and on the road, awaiting developments in the ring.

LONG SIGNAL DRILL FOR ELI VARSITY

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 27.—The Yale varsity had a rest from scrimmaging, confining its work to a long signal drill and rudimentary work, but a team made up of first string substitutes had a thirty-minute scrimmage against the scrubs.

During part of the drill, Osborne was at end in place of Wolfey. Both Barclay and Burnnell, who were quarters, were freshmen last year. During the workout McGunigle made two touchdowns, after which Noble kicked goals. In addition to the regular staff of coaches Ralph Bloomer, Heyliger, Church and Ed Glass were present.

DAUBERT MAY MANAGE 1925 TEAM AT READING

Reading, Penn., Sept. 27.—Spencer A. Abbott, Washington D. C., manager of the Reading International League Club for two seasons, resigned, effective at once. He waived the third year of his contract and decided to take a berth elsewhere.

Jake Daubert, Schuykill Haven, veteran first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, may become playing manager of the Reading team.

JONES LEADING VON ELM 4 UP IN GOLF PLAY

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 27 (A.P.)—Bobby Jones of Atlanta was progressing steadily toward his national amateur golf title today. He was four up after playing eighteen holes of his thirty-six-hole match with George Von Elm of Los Angeles.

Superiority in short shots with irons and a slight edge in putting gave the Southern star his margin, and Von Elm had the experience trailing at lunch time for the first time in the tournament.

Jones was never down after the first hole. He was two up at the turn and for the round won seven holes against three for Von Elm.

The morning cards:

KATE HAL SETS RECORD IN FREE-FOR-ALL PACE

Rochester, N. H., Sept. 27.—Yesterday's free-for-all pace was won by Kate Hal, driven by Billy Leese. The event went five heats, with Grace Direct winner of two. The Katie mare won the first heat by an eyelash from Grace Direct in 2:04¼, the fastest mile ever raced here in the pace or trot. She repeated in 2:05¼. Then the Direct mare grabbed off the next two in time much slower. The final heat was a loaf.

The Boston sportsman, Riley Crosby, had the pleasure of seeing his handsome four-year-old trotter, Watts Edition, win his second race of the week, the 2:20 trot. Hilarious was best in the 2:18 pace, while Billy Fleming had his Excello trotter going good and won the 2:10 stake trot.

MORRILL GIRL GOES TO CONNECTICUT SCHOOL

Eleven-year-old Margaret Morrill, daughter of Leon G. and Florence R. Morrill of Brookline, will attend school in Connecticut this coming Winter.

That question was settled by counsel for the divorced husband and wife when the matter of where the girl was to go to school came up in Superior Court. Morrill had brought a petition asking that his wife be enjoined from sending the girl to a school in the South.

AMATEUR NINES IN TITLE GAMES

On Sunday on the Boston Common the Trenton Baseball Club of East Boston and the Boylston team of Jamaica Plain, winners in their respective groups, Intermediate division of the Boston Municipal Amateur Baseball League, start a three-game series for the championship of their class.

A double-header will be played, the first game to start at 2 o'clock. Should a third game be necessary between these two teams, it will be played on the Common on Sunday afternoon, October 5.

The second game of the league's senior series is scheduled for the J. J. Connolly playground, Marcella street, Roxbury, on Sunday, September 28, at 2:30 p. m., when the St. Joseph Catholic team meets the Mt. Pleasant team. St. Joseph lost the first game of the series last Sunday to the Elliots 3 to 2, and to stay in the running must beat Mt. Pleasant. The latter play the Elliots at the Eustis playground on Sunday, October 5.

These three teams have proved their superiority over all other teams in their districts and are so evenly matched that close followers of the league predict that the series will end in a triple tie. Should such a condition exist, all three teams report to the Common on Sunday, October 12, where a drawing for numbers will be held.

Number one to play number two, the winner after a fifteen minutes rest playing the number three team, the victor to be awarded the championship prizes and all the honors which accompany same.

MRS. STONE WINS BOSTON GOLF TITLE

Mrs. E. C. Stone, Belmont Springs, won the women's Boston district golf championship at the Country Club by defeating Miss Elizabeth Gordon, Wannamoisett, 1 up, at 19 holes.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By George P. Medbury

THE majority of henpecked husbands in England have formed an association and are planning to fight for equal rights. The members of this club will allow their wives fifteen cross words a day.

ANY woman who wants to insult her husband oftener than this will have to get permission from the board of directors.

SHE will also be furnished with a list of words to call him.

THIS list will contain standard words and no wife will be allowed to make up any of her own.

THERE will be three or four hundred words, several of which cannot be found in the dictionary.

IF she can't find any that are strong enough to express her contempt for husband then she'll have to go to court and hire a lawyer to call him names.

FOR fifty dollars you can employ an attorney who will guarantee to hurt your husband's feelings or give you your money back.

ONE of the strictest rules of this organization is that no wife is allowed to nag her husband before breakfast.

SHE has to wait until he's finished eating, as no man is capable of arguing on an empty stomach.

HE can't think of any stinging replies to give her until after he's had his ham and eggs.

SOME women nag their husbands by crying, so this association passed a law limiting a wife to three quarts of tears a day.

BUT on Saturdays and Sundays she can weep to the extent of a gallon.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. F. X. Mahoney
Boston Health Commissioner

MANY years ago a French philosopher, Jean Jaques Rousseau, in a novel entitled "Amiel," advocated a return to the ways of primitive nature in the bringing up of children.

Dr. Mahoney.

He traced the development of a child who under a favoring environment, according to his plan, was permitted to grow up practically without clothing and practically without check to his natural impulses.

It has taken the world all these decades to furnish the scientific basis for Rousseau's contention, namely, that what humanity most needs is an abundance of sunlight.

The spectrum has been discovered and, as a result, the white light of day, the sunlight, has been analyzed into its constituent elements. It has been found to consist of different color rays. Each ray possesses its particular color because of the length of the wave that it induces in the ether.

Rays have been found to have a different effect upon those phenomena that we call life, according to their color.

Thus, certain of them, which are known as violet rays, are known to destroy the life of many forms of germs on the surface of the body.

Sunlight, properly used in the form of a sunbath, by which is meant the exposure of the entire body for a time to the effects of daylight, becomes wholesomely promotive of health. It stimulates the circulation, it tones up the muscles, it relieves the nutritional organs of congestion, it gives a wholesome impetus to the secretions, it increases the appetite.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

I have had trouble with my complexion for the last few months. Is there any salve I could put on it that would help? MISS R. P. M.
Roxbury.

I would advise that you go to a skin clinic at the City Hospital or [illegible] General Hospital, for treatment. It would be impossible for [illegible] anything to you without seeing you first.

I have not yet been able to find anything which agrees with my baby. Can you recommend a food to me for a six-months-old baby?
MRS. W. B. C., Boston.

If you have no family physician, I would recommend that you take your child to the Children's Hospital, No. 300 Longwood avenue, and have them prescribe a formula for you according to your child's [illegible] condition.

I have a bad [illegible] of catarrh of the nose and throat. Is there any spray I could use with safety? B. J. C.
Concord.

We do not recommend sprays, or medicines of any sort. I think it would be best for you to go to the nose and throat clinic of some hospital for examination. Would recommend that you try the Massachusetts General Hospital, Fruit street, Boston.

UNITED FRUIT CO.'S FOUNDER IS DEAD

Andrew W. Preston, known throughout the world as "Fruit King of the Tropics," and president of the United Fruit Company, is dead at his home in Swampscott, of stomach trouble.

Mr. Preston suffered an attack of stomach trouble some months ago, but recovered. Several weeks ago he suffered a milder attack, but members of his family and his friends were not alarmed. His death came suddenly.

A. W. Preston

It was the genius of Mr. Preston that created the United Fruit Company with its great holdings through Central America and the West Indies. Many years ago he conceived the idea of operating a line of fast steamers to carry fruit from the tropics and the Great White Fleet was the result.

Mr. Preston was also president of the Fruit Dispatch Company, Fruit Wharf Company, Nipe Bay Company, Revere Sugar Refinery, Simmons Sugar, Ltd., Tela Railroad Company, Truxville Railroad Company, Tropical Radio Company and chairman of the board of the Tropical Fruit Steamship Company, Ltd.

Mr. Preston was born on June 29, 1846, the son of Benjamin and Sarah Preston. He received his early education in the public schools of Beverly, and in 1869 he was married to Miss Frances E. Gutterson of Weymouth. In politics he was a Republican. Among the clubs to which he belonged were the Boston Press Club, as a life member; the Algonquin, Country, City and Merchants' Club.

He was vice-president of the Northern Railroad of Costa Rica, a director of Elders & Fyffes, Ltd., London; Abangarez Gold Fields, Costa Rica; First National Bank of Boston, National Bank of Cuba, U. S. Refining and Mining Company.

The death of the fruit company head was broadcast from the United Fruit radio station WBF, atop the Board of Trade building. All ships of the "Great White Fleet," no matter in what waters, today are flying their flags at half mast.

The news was cabled also to the terminals of the company in the tropics and flags were half-staffed at these terminals.

WOMAN CHAMPION SHOT TO HUNT AFRICAN GAME

New York, Sept. 27.—Mrs. E. L. King, champion crack shot of the American Northwest, accompanied by her husband and their ten-year-old son Ernest, sailed on the Majestic for a big game hunting expedition in British East Africa.

Already an escort composed of 100 black porters, each of whom will carry sixty pounds of baggage on the long trek into the wilderness, is being organized for them in Nairobi, capital of British East Africa.

JEWS OBSERVE NEW YEAR'S SUNDAY

In connection with the ushering in of the Jewish New Year 5685 on Sunday at sundown, Alexander Brin, editor and publisher of the Jewish Advocate and other English-Jewish publications in New England, made public messages of greeting from President Coolidge, Governor Cox, Governor Baxter of Maine, Governor Templeton of Connecticut, Governor Proctor of Vermont, Governor Flynn of Rhode Island, Louis E. Kirstein, Louis Marshall, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, as well as from many other men of national and international repute.

President Coolidge in his message to Mr. Brin pays high tribute to the Jews for their part in the upbuilding of this country. He says:

"They are to be congratulated on the splendid spirit with which they have assimilated the purposes and aspirations of this country's policy. In a nation whose laws know no favored race or group or religion, they have won their way because they have proved their genius for fine co-operation in the common interest."

Governor Cox writes: "The approaching Jewish New Year brings with it satisfaction in the accomplishments of the year just coming to a close and hope and faith for the year about to begin, meaning not only success in material things, but success in unselfish service in helping others, and in the advancement of civic righteousness."

Governor Proctor of Vermont writes: "One of the foundation stones of our government is religious freedom, but may we never become an unreligious country."

Governor Flynn of Rhode Island writes: "At a time when scepticism and rationalism are denying the cherished tenets of all religion it is gratifying to note the devotion of pious people to the duties of their faith."

TIPCART TIPS, BUT IT WAS "TOO PREVIOUS"

A tipcart that tipped too soon caused a little excitement and a bit of annoyance to pedestrians and motorists in Winter street today.

The cart is owned by J. S. Sweeney, and was driven by William Thibou, No. 44 Kendall street, Roxbury.

Loaded too heavily in the rear, the cart suddenly reared backward and dumped a load of ashes in the street and on the sidewalk. Thibou was hit by the pole of the cart as it flew upward when the rear end of the vehicle went down.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE "TIP"

By Sol Vitt

Today the Boston American presents a "tip" as an aid to solvers of C. E. Latto's Cross Word Puzzle which appeared yesterday.

No. 37—horizontal—"chaste" is "continent."
No. 28—vertical—"servile flatterers" is "minions."

Therefore in the puzzle these words align as follows:

```
      28

       M
```

Now, Fans, make a cleanup of the rest of it.

Following is a solution to Mac R. Gold's puzzle.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Most people in Wall Street are confidently predicting a further rise in the price of stocks.

Cheering business news has come from most parts of the country, and a much better return can be earned on money invested in securities than when used to purchase commercial paper or when rented day by day to brokers. Wall Street reasons that agriculture is doing well, that business is going moderately well, that the railroads are earning encouraging profits, and that labor is enjoying excellent wages. Then, too, good news is expected shortly from Europe. And Wall Street has little doubt as to how the Presidential election will go.

Therefore, Wall Street is buying rather than selling stocks.

Great is the power of printers' ink. San Francisco has started, for the third year in succession, to raise $400,000 to conduct the Californians Incorporated Advertising which has made such an impression throughout the length and breadth of the country.

How many inquiries, think you, has this advertising brought? More than 220,000!

Other states and cities should get into touch with Californians Incorporated and learn how "prospects" have been drawn to the State, particularly the central and northern parts. The slogan has been "authoritative information." When a farmer writes wanting information about the possibilities of fruit growing, Californians Incorporated furnishes him with a book written for it by the best authority in the State. Every important phase of the State's activities have been similarly covered by notable authorities. Prospective settlers are thus able to digest all the facts for themselves.

Having found that national advertising has paid handsomely, business men naturally are willing to supply the necessary funds. Even had there been no advertising campaign, California's population doubtless would have increased considerably. But everyone in the State recognizes that the phenomenal inflow of population has been greatly stimulated by letting the rest of the world know what California has to offer.

Is there not a timely lesson in this for other progressive communities? Cities and States do not stand still: they either go forwards or backwards. Intelligently handled printers' ink is the tonic not a few other parts of the continent greatly need.

Charles M. Schwab is now regarded as the "daddy" of the practical steel masters of America. Just what the the industry's prospects? I put the question to Mr. Schwab and his answer, given here, will be read and commented upon with keen interest by everyone who strives to analyze the business outlook:

"The steel industry has turned the corner. It has turned the corner, I believe, in prices as well as in activity.

"The heads of the principal companies acted very promptly—and drastically—when the drop in new orders set in this Spring. This has meant that there has been no serious over-production.

"Therefore, the improvement in demand which is now developing will logically cause an increase in operations and should also bring some betterment in the low prices which the spell of dullness brought about.

"While ship repairing is the principal activity in our shipbuilding yards, as soon as the confidently expected recovery in Europe gains headway, the shipping industry should do better."

MOTOR TRADE FORECAST FOR BIG GROWTH

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

What of the business future?

"Have you ever given thought to the subject of what industry is likely to expand the most during the next ten or fifteen years?" asked a prominent broker. Then he added:

"My guess is the motor truck and motor bus; the transportation of freight and passenger over public highways, and I believe that an investment with the long pull idea in the companies manufacturing these vehicles will prove to be very successful."

What about the old belief that election years exert a strong influence on the stock market?

C. W. Barron's Boston News Bureau says:

Main trend of prices was not materially affected during presidential campaigns in the last twenty years.

Major trend in 1920, when President Harding was elected, had been downward for a year and continued so for about ten months after November 4.

The election of President Wilson in 1916 was preceded by two years of rising prices, and it was but three weeks after the fateful day that the market started its drastic decline, lasting fourteen months.

The first election of President Wilson, in 1912, was preceded by seven months of indecisive movements and followed by two years of major depression.

For twelve months after the election of President Taft, in 1908, the market enjoyed a continuous rise and election day was followed by another year of upward swing.

The election of President Roosevelt in 1904 was preceded by a year of rising prices and followed by fourteen months of inflated values.

This takes us back far enough to show clearly that the major movements are usually well under way long before the presidential election.

The major movements cited show that we had three down swings lasting 22, 14 and 24 months, average of 20 months, three upswings lasting 24, 24 and 26 months, an average of 24 months. How long has the current bull swing been underway? Has it been underway since August, 1921, more than three years or longer than any previous bull movement? Or did the major movement culminate in March, 1923, a year and seven months after it started, followed by the shortest bear campaign probably on record, one of seven months to October last year and amounting to a drop of nearly 20 points in the average?

That bear movement is the subject of much discussion, but the better of the argument appears to be had by those maintaining that it completed the cycle and that a bull market started then which has now been underway only 11 months.

This would indicate another year of rising prices. If the bull market has been running for more than three years with a seven-month technical reaction intervening, the end of the bull market is near, if indeed it has not already been witnessed.

BULLS RULE IN N. Y. WEEK-END MARKET

Bullish demonstrations in high-grade industrials and public utilities featured the week-end half-holiday session of the New York stock market.

Standard industrials and rails were reflectively quiet but the undertone was strong.

Nash Motors soared 10 points to the highest price since the declaration of a stock dividend two years ago. S. S. Krege jumped 9¾. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and General Baking 4.

Dividend-paying carriers improved in sympathy with a 2-point rise in Atchison which touched the highest price since 1922.

Frisco common and preferred also attained enw peaks, but other low-priced shares, with the exception of Norfolk & Southern, were relatively quiet. The closing was firm. Sales approximated 500,000 shares.

United Fruit Reflects Death of Preston but a Little

United Fruit reflected the death of Andrew W. Preston, great New England industrial leader, founder and president of the company, but a very little in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange. The reassuring statement issued by the directors that Mr. Preston's policies would be maintained had a quieting effect.

Trading locally during the first hour was moderately active with prices showing a tendency to ease off.

Boston & Maine issues, which featured earlier in the week by reaching new 1924 highs, continued to ease off. The common and preferred "A" declined a half-point to 20 and 26½ respectively and the preferred "C" a point to 31. Half-point losses were also recorded by Edison Electric at 181 and Massachusetts Gas common at 72½.

Warren Brothers issues ran against the general trend of the market by recording advances. The common was up ⅛ to 36¼ and the first preferred 1¾ to 38¼.

AMERICAN TOBACCO MAY READJUST ITS CAPITAL

Though details remain to be determined upon, there is every reason to believe American Tobacco Co. will shortly decide upon a capital readjustment. Plan which is receiving most consideration provides for splitting common and common "B" shares of $100 par, two for one into $50 par shares. If this is done the new stock would undoubtedly be placed on $7 basis, which would be equivalent of $14 for present shares, compared with $12 now being paid. But if no capital readjustment is decided upon, common shareholders will probably receive extra distribution before end of year.

York's Governorship puzzle politicians and Wall Street betting men.

How many votes will the ghost of T. R. bring to his son, trying to follow in his father's steps? Al Smith has a following considerable in number that nothing can take from him.

Events in the last Democratic convention have made some of the following more enthusiastically determined than ever to rebuke what they consider to be discrimination against Al Smith on account of his Catholic faith.

It will be an interesting fight. Bettors will be wise if they "hold off" for a while.

HERE IS a really good international joke:

Chang, Chinese general, has been bombarding China's great wall with TNT from flying machines—heaven knows why, perhaps for target practice.

Now he takes to dropping explosives from the sky on his enemies, killing a few, and the League of Nations solemnly says to him: "Hey, you mustn't do that. Don't you know that's barbarous?"

Poor Chang wonders why he can't imitate killing methods of the West along with other occidental accomplishments. He knows we "superior white men" bomb each other, when we want to.

Bonus Questions Answered

J. D., HINGHAM, MASS.

Q.—I am the mother of a boy who served on board ship in the Navy from December 23, 1917, to October 2, 1919, when he died. Am I entitled to anything under the bonus?

A.—If your son died leaving no unmarried widow or children under 18 years of age and you were dependent upon him at the time of his death, you are entitled to apply for the bonus, which will amount to about $215, payable to you in cash in ten equal quarterly installments, the first payment to begin sometime after March, 1925.

T. H. D., U. S. S. S. 11.

Q.—I am a continuous service man in the Navy from 1898 up to the present time. My service record has not the names of all the vessels I served on during the war and I cannot remember the exact dates. Can I apply without this information?

A.—Yes. In question number 1 asking for information as to the place and dates of service give the ships you were on and the approximate dates to the best of your memory for the period beginning April 6, 1917, and ending July 1, 1919.

F. W. H., LACONIA, N. H.

Q.—I was in the Army from November 4, 1917, until July 31, 1919, with service in France from August 30, 1918, until July 24, 1919. How much bonus will I get?

A.—Your service will entitle you to receive a 20-year paid up insurance policy with a face value of about $1600, which is the maximum allowed under the law.

E. L. H., FITCHBURG.

Q.—I enlisted October 29, 1917, had active service December 12, 1917, went to France June 5, 1918, returned home July 5, 1919, and was discharged July 10, 1919. How much bonus will I receive?

A.—From your length of service you will receive a 20-year paid up insurance policy with a face value of about $1,000.

C. B. B., ABINGTON.

Q.—Are ex-service men in the Merchant Marine, who served during the war, entitled to the bonus?

A.—No. The bonus law only applies to members of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps and not to members of the Merchant Marine.

RURAL CARRIER FREED ON THEFT CHARGE

A jury in the United States district court acquitted Albert L. Bolin, former temporary rural mail carrier in Randolph, charged with embezzling payments on C. O. D. parcel post packages.

Young Bolin, who is a neighbor of Attorney Asa P. French, was defended by the latter. It appeared from evidence that the government was far behind in Bolin's pay checks, and it was claimed that he retained the money on the packages largely so he could keep his auto in repair in order to keep working on his job.

CONSULT A REALTOR

When you deal with a Realtor you obtain the services of an accepted member of a local Real Estate Board. That in itself gives assurance.

If there should be grounds for complaint against a Realtor you can appeal to the Board of which he is a member. That is a protection.

The standards of the National Association call for honesty and efficiency on the part of its members. That means dependable service.

All Realtors in Boston are members of the Boston Real Estate Exchange and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and are bound by its rules and adhere to its code of ethics.
